CAMBRIDGE POLICE TO-DAY RANSACK MUENTER HOME IN SEARCH FOR POISON

Sketched at Her Home by Boston American Staff Artist.

MRS. EDITH CHASE, IMPORTANT STATE WITNESS IN MUENTER CASE.

'Frisco Still Needs Both Food and Cash--Schmitz

If the information has gone through the country that we are amply supplied with food, it is most unfortunate. It is not even known how much money we can depend upon with which to purchase supplies. While it is true that contributions of money will be very much more to the purpose than contributions of supplies, the world should be notified that if the one is not available the other will be most gratefully received.—Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco.

Take Away Large Quantity of Foodstuffs and Jellies to Be Analyzed for Traces of Arsenic—Sister Appeals to Missing Man to Return.

The Cambridge police, who are investigating the strange death of Mrs. Erich Muenter, believed to have been poisoned, and who are looking for the woman's husband, a Harvard instructor, searched the house where she died to-day and carried away with them a market basketful of articles, consisting mostly of foods, which they will have analyzed to see if any traces of arsenic can be found.

The search was made by Chief Inspector Hurley and Inspector Deehan. The officers were accompanied by Lawyer G. A. A. Pevey, who has been engaged as counsel for the missing man by his sister, Miss Bertha Muenter.

When the police officials emerged from the building at No. 107 Oxford street, Inspector Deehan carried the basket. It was well filled, and its contents were covered by a newspaper. The officers declined to discuss what they had found.

LOOK FOR POISON TRACES

It is known, however, that one of the articles that they will have analyzed is the jar of beef tea from which Mrs. Muenter was fed shortly before her death, and which she told Mrs. John G. Paine, a Christian Science doctor, had a queer taste. In the basket were pellies, milk and other foods that were kept for the sick woman.

This visit of the police to the house where the Muenters lived followed strict orders given to the police working on the case to-day, "to find the man. It was said that money was given the policemen with which to prosecute their search more vigorously than they have heretofore conducted it.

When officers visited Harvard College to-day in their endeavors to get at the records of the instructor in German they found an unexpected impediment in their way. They were not allowed to look at any of the records that might throw light upon the missing man. It is believed that this action was decided upon by the authorities to save the college as much as possible from publicity in connection with this case.

"These records will not be given up," the police were told at the college, "unless a court orders us to do so."

NEW ARSENIC THEORY.

Professor Whitney, the noted Harvard expert, who found arsenic in the dead woman's stomach, will take charge of the articles found to-day in the Muenter apartments. It has been agreed that a chemist representing the missing man will also have access to them.

Lawyer Pevey said that he had a theory that would account for any arsenic that might be found. It is believed that he contends that Mrs. Muenter used arsenic for her complexion. Her Christian Scientist friends declare that she was not a user of the drug.

SISTER URGES MUENTER TO COME BACK AND FIGHT

In a fervent appeal addressed to Muenter yesterday afternoon, and many girls had to go to other towns to get boops. Hoop rolling is a feature of the May day festivities to-day, and Miss Ruth L. Gordon of Worcester, president of the seniors, will lead the rollers.

Visitors will not be admitted to the college grounds to-day, as the students, in the costumes of their girlhood days, will have everything their own way.

SAN FRANCISCO WILL BUILD NEW CITY HALL

TEMPORARY STRUCTURE TO BE ERECTED AT ONCE FOR MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—San Francisco will build a new city hall at once, a temporary structure, but one which will do away with the necessity of paying the high rent rates which the owners of property available for municipal use are inclined to charge.

A site which is looked upon favorably is the Lincoln school property on the corner of Market and Fifth streets. It is proposed to erect the temporary building of corrugated iron on a steel frame, and to have in it all the city offices, as it will be practically fireproof.

$2,500,000 MORE AID TO FRISCO BY HEARST RESOLUTION

Special to the Boston American.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Representative William R. Hearst yesterday introduced a resolution in the House providing for a $2,500,000 additional appropriation for the relief of San Francisco. The wording of the resolution is as follows:

"That the Secretary of War be and he is hereby authorized and directed to procure in the open market or otherwise additional supplies for the relief of destitute persons and sufferers from the recent earthquake and fire; and, in executing this resolution, the Secretary of War is directed, so far as is practicable, to expend the sum hereby appropriated wholly within the State of California, so that the people of that State shall have the whole benefit of the appropriation and the greatest possible stimulus be given to the revival of business.

"Be it further resolved, that, to enable the Secretary of War to execute the provisions of this joint resolution, in addition to the sums heretofore for this purpose appropriated, there be hereby appropriated the sum of $2,500,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War."

French Workingmen to Fight the Police

375 ARRESTS IN PARIS

Trouble Began Early To-day When 60,000 Laborers Started a General Strike.

Continuous Rioting in the Belleville Market; Levy, the Labor Leader, Taken Into Custody.

PARIS, May 1.—There were many skirmishes between laboring men and the police early to-day. At nearly every gathering place of laborers there was some kind of a conflict, and the police had the greatest difficulty in keeping order and preventing the workingmen from interrupting traffic.

The most serious of these early clashes occurred when 800 strikers, who were coming out of the Labor Exchange building, ran into twenty bicycle policemen in the Rue Oberkampf. The strikers opened fire upon the policemen with revolvers, and the latter replied. The strikers were dispersed after a brief engagement. One of the strikers was seriously hurt.

It is officially announced by the police that 375 arrests were made up to noon.

There was almost continuous rioting in the Belleville market, which is to Paris what the Bowery is to New York. Striking printers, who made their headquarters in that locality, caused most of the trouble. Three printers were injured in this fighting, and 112 arrests were made.

Fully 60,000 meet on strike this morning. Stormy meetings were held at the Labor Exchange by the various organizations, each of which decided for itself what its members should do. The strike agitators carried the day at most of these gatherings.

As the various meetings broke up clashes with the police occurred. The Place de la Republique was the scene of most of these disturbances.

Hundreds of arrests were made. Most of these were for minor offences, such as resisting or swearing at an officer. Twenty photographers were arrested during a fight with the police as the men were leaving the ball after voting for a general strike.

M. Levy, one of the active heads of the labor confederation, for whom a warrant was issued yesterday, was arrested on his return to Paris this morning. He had been in the provinces and was taken at the Lyons Railway Station as he left his train.

SMOKED AS HE SANK TO DEATH

HAMBURG, May 1.—"One more cigarette—the last," were the final words of the commander of the ill-fated Belgian cadet ship Comte de Smet de Naeyer, which foundered at sea early in the week. Two other officers of the craft stood at their posts as the ship went down.

The last seen of the chaplain he was making the sign of the cross. The first officer was picked up by one of the ship's boats after the vessel sank, but seeing that there was no room for him he threw himself overboard and was drowned.

The survivors landed at Cuxhaven and came to this city yesterday. Their stories show that the vessel sank from a mysterious leak. The cement cargo soaked up the water almost as fast as it came in and the pumps were of little use.

DEATH LURKS IN POISONED CANDY FOR GIRL OF 12

TRENTON, N. J., May 1.—While twelve-year-old Josephine Davenport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Davenport, is believed to be dying to-day, after having eaten of poisoned candy, mysteriously sent through the mails to her home at Washington Crossing, near here, the police are baffled with a case outrivalling in sensational elements the famous Elsie Smith case at Albany or that of Mrs. Botkin in California.

The police have placed under arrest both the girl's father and mother. They were placed in separate cells in the jail here to-day, to prevent communication from one to the other.

The police are at variance over two theories—one that husband and wife, although separated, were in collusion to obtain the insurance on their daughter's life; the other, that either husband or wife, each having insured the child, sent the box of candy.

What remained of the candy was to-day turned over to a chemist by Public Prosecutor Crossley, who has taken direct charge of the case. The candy is believed to have been treated with arsenic.

In regard to various elements the strange case here resembles forcibly that of the death of Mrs. Erich Muenter by arsenical poisoning at Cambridge.

FEAR MANY LOST IN CHANNEL CRASH

NEW HAVEN, Scotland, May 1.—A disastrous collision occurred in the channel early to-day between the British steamer Hinesfield and a large four-masted bark, the name of which has not as yet been ascertained. The Hinesfield sank immediately after the collision, right in the track of shipping, and heavy loss of life is feared.

CHILD ELOPERS ARE FORGIVEN

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 1.—Eddie Edwards, aged sixteen years, and Belle Walden, aged fifteen, announced to-day that they were married on Saturday by the Rev. Maurice Steadman of the Middletown Baptist Church. They are the youngest pair of elopers New Haven ever had. The child-bride's mother, Mrs. Jeremiah Walden, has forgiven them and they will live with her. Young Edwards's parents are wealthy.

TO KILL GRAFT IN SEWER LOAN

A bill, aimed to stop the Boston sewer graft, was reported to the House to-day by the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs. This is the bill petitioned for by Councilman Myron Pierce. Boston, under the act of 1903, may borrow $500,000 in addition to the regular appropriation of $1,000,000 for sewer construction and maintenance. This bill, if enacted, will prevent the borrowing of the $500,000.

POLICE SEARCH FOR 30 GIRLS AT WELLESLEY

Students Violate 11 O'Clock Law, and the Faculty Ask Officers to Find Them.

WELLESLEY, May 1.—Thirty fair junior students at Wellesley College violated the 11 o'clock law last night, threw the faculty into excitement and had the police of the town and all the special patrolmen of the college on their trail all night. Not a trace could be found of them, but before daylight the faculty announced that the girls had been appointed for. They had slipped in one by one while the police were scouring the town for them. The college law says that all girls shall be in at 11 o'clock.

The seniors had planned to burn their books, an annual custom. They had piled the books in the centre of the lawn and were doing incantations and wild dances around the pile when a crowd of juniors descended upon them, put them to flight and captured most of the books.

The rout was complete, but the juniors wandered far from the fold. When it was discovered by the heads of the departments that these girls were not in their little cots a general alarm was sent out to the police. So the police began their search, and were rewarded by discovering after a long hunt that the girls had eluded them and returned to their rooms.

The seniors made a corner in the hoop market yesterday afternoon, and many

BANK WRECKER COLE'S "REST" IN JAIL ENDS

Comes Home From Six Years' Stay in Greenfield as Privileged Prisoner.

At his home in Hingham, Charles H. Cole was to-day greeted by many of his old friends after his return from serving six years in the jail at Greenfield for the embezzlement of nearly $400,000 from the Globe National Bank of this city, of which he was president.

While the arrest and subsequent confession of Cole made a sensation in the financial world of New England, the hospitable treatment which he received while a prisoner, approaching at times the luxurious, caused fully as much comment.

The victims of the man's dishonesty were apparently forgotten, in a desire to make things as pleasant as possible for the former bank president. The rule which was the cause of the losses of so many thousands to the stockholders of the bank went to jail in a private section of a sleeping car.

Dined at Mansion House.

When the train reached Greenfield Cole and the members of his family were driven to the Mansion House, where the parlor floor Rooms had been prepared for the party, and after dining they all repaired to them and had a talk. Then the prisoner who had been sentenced to serve eight years in jail was escorted to that institution and introduced to the sheriff.

It was reported that he was made head bookkeeper of the prison. That work only required a little of his time. The rest of the day he spent about the place, apparently going where he willed.

Took Drives With Family.

It is declared that it was no uncommon thing for him to take long drives with members of his family and friends who visited Greenfield to see him.

Jailer Richardson was asked about the privileges that were afforded Cole and denied other inmates of the prison.

"He is a United States prisoner, you know," replied the jailer, "and that is not the same as a common prisoner."

Richardson accompanied his distinguished prisoner to the train yesterday. The shook hands like two dear friends who were reluctant to part at the station.

"You know how sorry I am to part with you," said the released prisoner, "but you know how glad I am to have my liberty."

Kissed Jailer's Daughter Good-by.

Before leaving the jail Cole kissed the little daughter of Richardson. There were tears in the man's eyes. The little girl did not understand them.

"Poor Mr. Cole!" said the child. "What are you crying about?"

Mrs. Cole never forgot her husband. Once a week she journeyed from her home to Greenfield and ate with the guest of Mr. Richardson and his wife. The party of four enjoyed widest mirth round together about the large farm.

After his release Cole said to a reporter:

"Every one in the jail has been exceedingly kind, and hundreds of others as well. I wish to thank them all.

"After a short rest I shall go to work, man fashion. I can hardly realize after the long struggle that I am now free. But it looks just fourteen days of being six years, since I came to Greenfield and began my sentence. It seems alright good to be at liberty once more. It seems still to be paying money for a ticket. I would like to have all my friends write to me at my home in Hingham, and I shall be glad to hear from all of them."

MAY BREAKFAST NETS $2,000

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, May 1.—Wives of wealthy shoe manufacturers and other prominent business men, with their pretty daughters, rose before daylight to-day, went down to the new Realty building and served Boston baked beans, coffee, pie, cold meats and other Yankee dishes to hundreds of shoe shop employes and their families, bearing a net profit of $2,000 for sweet charity's sake.

It was the annual May breakfast for the benefit of the Associated Charities and 5,000 people were served between 5 and 9 o'clock in the morning.

BOND COMPANY IS RESTRAINED

Judge Fessenden, in equity session of the Superior Court, this morning granted a temporary injunction against the American Reserve Bond Company and its agents restraining it from doing business in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts until complaints by certain bondholders that bad investments had impaired the value of the bonds held by them, and that the company had no license to do business here, ought to fully investigated. The injunction further provides that none of the property of the company be removed from the State.

New Course to Be Added to Curriculum at Opening of Fall Term.

Boston American Received Over 15,000 Letters, Mostly in Favor of Movement.

Irish history is to be taught in the public schools of Boston.

At the School Board to-day it was stated that the addition of this course to the curriculum of the public schools would be made at the opening of the Fall term in September.

The school board voted unanimously last night at its meeting to place the study of Irish history in the Boston schools.

This order was brought about after the petition by committees representative of the Irish-American clubs of Boston. The BOSTON AMERICAN devoted a great deal of space to discussion of the matter, intended to secure the opinion of Boston citizens.

95 Per Cent. Favor Movement.

The AMERICAN received over 15,000 letters, and ninety-five per cent. of these favored the introduction of Irish history into the Boston public schools.

Thomas H. Carroll of South Boston, president of the Knights of St. Brendan, said to-day:

"But for the publicity given by the BOSTON AMERICAN we would have had a hard and long fight to bring about this change.

"In the high schools the history will be an elective branch, in the grammar schools grades. It will be a part of the supplementary reading in connection with school histories.

"The committee of Irish-Americans who urged upon the School Board the action taken is composed of Jeremiah Carroll, chairman; Martin J. Lomasney, Rockbury; Alden O'Gallagher of Cambridge, Patrick J. Crotty of Roxbury and Maurice O'Brien.

"The textbook which will be used in the Boston schools is 'Irish History Story,' by John and Spencer.

"Money was appropriated for an additional force of clerks for the secretary for the expediting of the work on the plan for pensioning teachers.

LAW UPSETS N. Y. SALOONS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Half of the hotels in New York are selling liquor without warrant of law to-day. Close to a hundred saloons in the greater city closed their doors for good at midnight. All the 500 so-called Raines law hotels closed at midnight and opened up at 5 o'clock this morning as plain ordinary saloons in which the dust-covered sandwich will no longer figure as a legal subterfuge.

All this is the result of the new Page law, amending the Raines law, and giving stricter definition of what constitutes a hotel and imposing on the Bureau of Buildings the responsibility of inspecting and reporting on hotels which do not comply with the State laws in construction.

STORM HAVOC AT ORLEANS

ORLEANS, May 1.—Two houses were wrecked and five persons knocked senseless by lightning in the first thunder storm of the season here last night.

The storm first broke over Hyannis, and for nearly forty-five minutes there was almost a continuous sheet of lightning and an incessant boom of thunder. All the fuses at the telephone exchange were blown out.

It was in Orleans, though, that the most damage was done, lightning first striking the cottage of Miss Elen Hewlett, a Summer resident, who lives in Boston. The lightning went through the entire place, tearing out plaster, clapboards and fittings. A house owned by Mrs. Percival was also wrecked, while the grocery store of E. T. Newcombe was badly damaged and the house of Eli Rogers slightly injured.

AMERICANS IN CRASH ON FRENCH RAILROAD

PARIS, May 1.—The transatlantic express, carrying steamer passengers from Havre to Paris, ran into a freight train late last night at Andresy. One trainhand was killed and several injured. Mrs. Van den Mills, her two daughters, and Mr. McGrath of Boston were passengers. They were not hurt.

ALL EUROPE IS QUIET OUTSIDE OF FRANCE AND RUSSIA

LONDON, May 1.—Great labor demonstrations are being held in Hyde Park this afternoon. One meeting there was given up entirely to the pupils of the Socialists.

Reports from the Continent say that the day is being generally observed as a holiday, and that there is no disorder outside of France and Russia.

In Warsaw the business interests of the city have been demoralized and the people thrown into a semi panic by the strike started by Socialists to bring about a general strike. The troops have completely surrounded the factory districts and cut off from the other sections of the city.

The Socialists are celebrating May day throughout Germany. Hundreds of meetings were held this morning, and there will be popular festivals this afternoon and evening. Over one thousand meetings have been held in the provinces, and it is estimated that over three million workmen ceased work for the day.

May Day is passing off quietly in Italy. The Government officials are permitting meetings of workingmen, also processions. Work is practically at a standstill.

ESTIMATE 30,000 MEN IDLE IN REGION OF THE GREAT LAKES

CHICAGO, May 1.—Orders which went into effect at midnight caused a strike of 20,000 vessel mates and brought lake navigation to a practical standstill.

The number of men idle in the Great Lakes region is estimated at 30,000.

There is a strike of iron molders already declared, and a strike of nearly one thousand structural iron workers imminent.

The lake situation is regarded by marine men as exceedingly serious. With longshoremen and mates out, members of three vessel crews controlled by those unions also may be involved. The firemen, oilers and water tenders comprise the principal marine branches likely to be called out.

At Buffalo 5,000 marine workers at the docks in that city are idle.

In Chicago harbor the signal for the strike was given by the footing of whistles on the tug boats.

MAY DAY LABOR TROUBLES FEW AROUND BOSTON

Comparatively Few Strikes and Good Prospects of Prompt Adjustment.

To-day is the time for employers to sign new agreements with labor unions in and about Boston. There is little trouble of any magnitude locally. There is a few small strikes on in this city, and several in other New England cities.

Many agreements of unions have not been signed by the employers, but several of the unions are waiting for amicable settlement through conciliation and arbitration.

Tile layers' helpers struck to-day for $2.50 per day for five days in the week and $1.50 for Saturday forenoon. It is likely that the bosses will go with the helpers. The journeymen ask $4.00 for an eight-hour day, with $2.50 for Saturday forenoon. The employers are favorable to the demands of the latter, it is believed.

Lumber Teamsters Union, 112, last night, ratified the 1906 agreement that gives $1 a week increase to tally men, makes the work day during the Winter months nine hours and during the Summer months ten hours as before.

Shop and Mill Hands Union expect to strike at one shop to-day because of non-union conditions, and others will soon be involved.

Bricklayers and asbestos workers suspended work last night pending a decision of the bosses this afternoon. The union will meet to-night at Wells Memorial Building, and if the decision of the bosses is not satisfactory, the strike will be officially ordered to-night. The men are receiving $5 a day and want $5.50.

Wood carvers to the number of 500 are on strike for a scale increase of $2 a week.

Fifty hostlers and drivers are on strike for a Saturday half holiday the year round.

LYNN.

LYNN, May 1.—Two hundred manufacturing machinists quit work here to-day to enforce their demand for a fifty-hour working week. About thirty painters struck refusing to work in open shops.

MELROSE.

MELROSE, May 1.—Carpenters in this city are dissatisfied with their wage scale, and demand a new agreement.

LAWRENCE.

LAWRENCE, May 1.—Eight hundred carpenters went on May Day strike this morning, demanding $3 for an eight-hour day. They now receive $2.50. Contractors here offered $2.80, but the offer is rejected.

FALL RIVER.

FALL RIVER, May 1.—Nearly 2250 bricklayers and stone masons are on strike here to-day for fifty cents an hour and an eight-hour day.

MANCHESTER.

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, May 1.—Three hundred carpenters of the North Shore went on strike to-day. They are fighting for wages of 41 cents an hour.

Two of the largest contracting and building concerns have surrendered to the demands of the men.

Work has been stopped as a consequence of the strike on the millionaire mansion and country place for Henry C. Frick, the New York and Pittsburg steel king.

MALDEN.

MALDEN, May 1.—Malden carpenters have asked the master builders for an increase in their wages from 37½ cents to 40 cents per hour.

WIFE-MURDER SUSPECT IS URGED TO FACE CHARGES.

SISTER APPEALS TO ERICH MUENTER TO RETURN

SCIENTISTS WHO TAKE HUMAN LIFE OUGHT TO BE KILLED, SAYS DR. HENSON

THE scientists who go around the world looking for victims in order to satisfy their own curiosity ought to be put out of the world, as it isn't safe living when they are in it.

They ought to be electrocuted on general principles. The Lord never meant to allow one being to take another human being's life with the view of satisfying himself as to the correctness of some fantastic theory he has in his mind. In this case the scientists would be just as dangerous to society as the murderer. The only proper place for such experimentists is the lunatic asylum or the electric chair. It is bad enough to take the lives of dogs and cats.

THE REV. P. S. HENSON.

Never was human life so cheap. It isn't a safe world to live in any more. About the safest crime to commit now is murder. All that is necessary is a smart murderer, a fool jury and a clever lawyer. The minute one is accused of murder a lot of sentimentalists begin apologizing for him. They say he has some mental peculiarities or something or other. He is championed by thousands who plead for him. He is made a hero and occupies the centre of the stage. That is why there are so many murders. The increase in murders in this country is alarming. The only way to stop it is to make the punishment sure and swift.—The Rev. P. S. Henson pastor of Tremont Temple.

Cambridge Police Search House Where Woman Died and Take Away Basket of Articles, Mostly of Food, to Be Analyzed.

ter, his sister, Miss Bertha Muenter, begs him to return to Cambridge, face the allegations that have been made and refrence to the death of his wife and defend himself.

This communication was printed in many newspapers of the West. It indicates that the whereabouts of the man are unknown both to Miss Muenter and Lawyer G. A. A. Pevey of Cambridge, who has been retained in his behalf.

This is the advertisement inserted in the newspapers with the hope that it would catch the eye of her brother and cause him to give himself up to the nearest authorities or come back alone to Cambridge:

"Erich Muenter—It is of the utmost importance for you to return to Cambridge at once to refute charges made against you. Counsel secured. Do not talk to anyone before you see your sister there. Friends are standing by and will support you."

THINKS HE WILL RETURN.

Mr. Pevey says that he believes he knows where Muenter is in spite of the advertisement which his sister thought necessary to insert for him.

Mr. Pevey is confident that Muenter is still alive and feels that his return to Cambridge voluntarily is made a matter of very near future.

The fact that the advertisement was inserted only in Western newspapers argues that the friends of the missing man feel that such a notice is more apt to reach him in Chicago or beyond than in the east.

Even in spite of this, the majority hold to the theory that if the Harvard instructor has left Chicago, his family believes he has gone toward the Pacific coast and not back toward Boston.

INQUEST LIKELY SOON.

An inquest in the Muenter case will be arranged for this week. It is stated, in order to get a clear, connected chain of evidence before the grand jury, which body the prosecution and the defence admit is vague at the present time.

Many witnesses who have been approached refuse to commit themselves, and it is felt that the legal investigation embodied in the inquest will be advisable, and that as soon as possible.

Attorney Pevey states that one of the points in his investigation which has surprised him is the firm stand in Muenter's behalf by many of his friends.

"The man has many warm advocates," he says. "Both among the students and faculty at Harvard and among the residents of Cambridge, I found many who are ready to champion his cause."

Prominent among these is the family of Edmund A. Whitman, a Cambridge lawyer, who took care of Muenter's three-year-old daughter, Helen, during her mother's illness.

Miss Muriel Whitman, a student at Radcliffe College, who has known Muenter for several years both in Cambridge and in Lawrence, Kan., comes warmly to his defence, saying:

"I have seldom known a man more devoted to his wife and family and more heartily in sympathy with his work. During his wife's illness he spoke frequently in tender terms of her, and took her suffering greatly to heart. My fear is that the charges which have been made against him have driven him to suicide. He was in a nervous overwrought state, just the sort of a man to act rashly in such a crisis."

Sister Begs Muenter in Advertisement to Return

Erich, it is of the utmost consequence to you to return to Cambridge at once to refute charges against you. Counsel secured. Do not talk to anyone before you see your sister there. Friends are all standing by you and will support you.— BERTHA MUENTER.—Advertisement published in Western newspapers.

NO BIGAMY CHARGE AGAINST MUENTER IN PORTLAND RECORDS

PORTLAND, Me., May 1.—The police records of this city for July, 1905, do not show any charge of bigamy against any person answering the description of Erich Muenter, as was reported. The only bigamy charge during that month was against Harry Miller, a Hessian, utterly unlike Muenter. The police of Portland, however, have Muenter's description and are keeping a lookout for him.

"POPS" HERE, BEGIN TONIGHT

That Spring has come and Summer is not far off will be made known musically at Symphony Hall tonight by the opening of the "Pop" concert season. The "Pops" will be a continuous performance from now on, being given nightly, Sunday excepted, until July 1. Tomorrow night will be Wagner evening, half of the programme being devoted to the Bayreuth master.

BRADFORD AGAIN TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR

In an open letter announcing himself as an independent citizens' candidate for Governor on the platform of State Government reform, Gamaliel Bradford charges that "improvements is by far the most heavily indebted State in the union, and that it is controlled by forty secret impersonal and irresponsible combinations.

"We must give up formulating parties for ends which we desire to attain and study the machinery, through which alone we can accomplish anything, the relative and operation of executive, legislative and judiciary.

"We need to know why an executive chosen by an immense effort of the people is practically an impotent figurehead; why the State is governed by some forty secret, irresponsible and irresponsible combinations working independently of each other and of enormous and really uncontrolled influence; why it is impossible to get any reliable information or guidance as to the administration of State and city affairs; why it is that Massachusetts is, by far the most indebted State in the union, at the same time that the burden of taxation is steadily increasing; why it is that the Legislature sits for five months every year, evolving statute books of 1,000 pages, of which nearly one-fifth consists of a repeal of those already passed; why special legislation is the object of loud complaint; why the suspicion, if not the evidence, of gross corruption in State and city affairs is steadily on the increase."

ARRESTED FRISCO COLLECTOR FREED

Lowell Wells, arrested in Chelsea a week since, charged by Mrs. George E. Milton with fraudulently soliciting funds for the sufferers in San Francisco, was discharged by Judge Stearns in the Chelsea police court. Mrs. Milton said that Wells had received $1 from her. Wells stated that he was soliciting the money for the San Franciscans as an individual. By several witnesses he proved his good character.

TWO MONSTER REUNIONS OF CATHOLICS

Holy Cross and Church of the Assumption Parishioners Gather.

Two monster Catholic choral reunions were held in Boston last night and about eight thousand people, young and old, attended. One was the reunion of the parishioners of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, at Mechanics' Hall, where about the thousand and five hundred present and fifteen hundred were gathered. The other was that of the Church of the Assumption at East Boston, where 2,500 persons assembled.

Mechanics' Hall, where the Cathedral held its reunion, was a gala scene.

There was the May pole for the little ones, a dance for the younger men and for those who wanted quiet there was a time of busy whist tables. And there was a concert, vocal and instrumental, for all. Mayor Fitzgerald came late in the evening and talked, concluding with an exhortation to the young people to get married.

Rev. Dr. John T. Mullen, rector of the Cathedral, was a happy man. The great gathering had been arranged under his especial guidance. Others who shared in the honors were Rev. Thos. S. James, Chancellor Thomas H. Mccoy, J. J. Crane, M. J. Sampson and Francis X. Dolan, with Thomas J. McCormack and M. J. Splaine, chancellor and vice-chancellor of the archdiocese.

The reunion of the Assumption parish was held in Lyceum Hall, East Boston, with 2,500 people in attendance. It was the first reunion the Rev. Father A. Pitz addressed the gathering in a cordial welcome speech. Mayor Fitzgerald came in just before 10 o'clock and spoke to the assembly. Dancing and other amusements followed the Mayor's speech.

FORTUNE WAITS LYNN WORKMAN

LYNN, May 1.—A snug little fortune of several thousand dollars awaits William Clark, supposed to be a shoemaker in this city. The police are looking for William to tell him of his good luck.

Mrs. Jane Willis, a sister of Clark, who for several years conducted a lodging house in this city, died suddenly in Hartford, Ct., a few days ago. She was on her way to enter a widow's home there and was stricken in a street car.

She left several thousand dollars, and Clark is the nearest relative. If he is not found this money will go to several nephews and nieces, who were not regarded favorably by Mrs. Willis while she was alive.

MUENTER'S MOTHER FAITHFUL TO HIM

LOS ANGELES, May 1.—Sheriff White of this city is working in co-operation with the police of the city in searching for Erich Muenter. The sheriff sent a deputy to Alhambra, where Muenter's mother and sister live, but found no trace of the fugitive.

Muenter's mother, like the professor, is a Christian Scientist. One of Muenter's sisters, unmarried, lives in a three-room cottage in Monrovia, and is employed by a Los Angeles fruit concern. Mother and daughter deny that Muenter has been in Monrovia or that they expect him to come to their home.

Mrs. Julia C. Muenter is a leader in the Christian Scientist church in Monrovia. She is a motherly-looking old lady, who declares that the whole story against her son was concocted to reflect on the Christian Science faith.

At one time when Muenter had questioned the faith of his wife and mother in the doctrine, the wife wrote to her mother-in-law, asking her to pray to get the husband back to the faith. A long correspondence followed.

Mrs. Muenter believes he was sincere in his efforts thereafter. She says her son is too tender-hearted to hurt any one. Since he was a boy of eighteen, when he came to live with the family, he has always taken care of his three younger sisters, and any one of them would die for him.

The family, she adds, is one with God, and no harm can come to them. She believes her son took his two children to Chicago and then returned to Boston, where he will turn up in due time. She believes from this saying that he deeply sorrows over the loss of his wife.

FATHER-IN-LAW CALLS HIM GUILTY

CHICAGO, May 1.—Morlig Krumbo, father of Mrs. Mueller, created a sensation right:

"On the day following the birth of my daughter's baby I received a long letter from her saying that her health was in excellent condition, and she soon would be able to leave her bed.

"Five days later I received a postal card from Muenter. He said that his wife was ill, that she had vomited and complained of a burning sensation in her stomach.

"He said that we were not to be alarmed, that the illness was not serious. I was much alarmed on receiving this message from my son-in-law.

"I recognized at once the symptoms of arsenical poison and spoke of it to the family. I have been a manufacturing chemist for many years and am familiar with the action of poisons.

"Until to-day I refused to believe my son-in-law guilty. Now I can no longer doubt his guilt.

"His absence and his failure to communicate with us is the strongest evidence against him. Outside of the presence of arsenic in the stomach as developed at the autopsy.

"After the birth of the first child, when the house was filled with gas, we were stupefied, but we never could find out anything."

WIFE DECLARED ERICH MUENTER "MENTALLY ILL"

Mrs. Ruth Gahm of Walnut street, Somerville, tells a story which may indicate either that Muenter was at times mentally unbalanced, or that his home life was not always harmonious.

Mrs. Gahm before her marriage was a waitress at a restaurant near Harvard square frequented by students. Mrs. Muenter did not join her husband in Cambridge for some months after he began his studies there. During that time the instructor took his meals at the restaurant, and became interested in Mrs. Gahm when he found that she was a German. He always patronized her table and talked with her in their native language.

Muenter told Mrs. Gahm when his wife arrived and expressed a desire to have them become acquainted, Mrs. Muenter came to Cambridge early last summer, and soon after her arrival Muenter invited Mrs. Gahm to dine at his home, and appointed a Sunday.

Mrs. Gahm kept the engagement, and when she called she was met by Mrs. Muenter, who seemed to be highly excited.

"I am very sorry, but it is impossible for us to entertain you to-day," Mrs. Muenter said. "Mr. Muenter is very ill. He had a sudden attack, and he is mentally ill. We will have to find some day later when we will be glad to see you."

Mrs. Gahm said she went away, but did not receive another invitation from Muenter. When she saw him later he made no reference to the dinner invitation.

Mrs. Gahm says she thought at first that Mrs. Muenter might have been jealous, but she afterward learned that Muenter was ill that Sunday. Mrs. Gahm made inquiries about the instructor, and she said she was told that he had a violent temper, and when aroused he became so angry that the reaction left him exhausted. When he became angry he was fractional, Mrs. Gahm said it was explained to her, and acted as if his mind was affected.

MAY DAY FINDS GREAT BILLS AT LOCAL THEATRES

NETHERSOLE'S NEW PROBLEM PLAY OF LOVE

Olga Nethersole, after several years' absence, renewed her acquaintance with a host of Boston friends last evening at the Colonial Theatre, when she made her first presentation in Boston of W. L. Courtney's "The Labyrinth." A very large audience greeted her as an old favorite and applauded her strongest scenes to the extent of many curtain calls. "The Labyrinth" is an adaptation of Paul Hervieu's "La Dedale." Like all those plays in which Miss Nethersole has appeared, it is a problem play, dealing with the intimate affairs of a man, a woman and another man. In its conclusion it is a tragedy.

Not as broad in its language as "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," nor as suggestive in its situations as "Sapho," there is, nevertheless much of unpleasantness in Miss Nethersole's repertoire that is not suitable for babes. The third act possesses features which, although the scene is based on pathos, set last evening's house into an audible murmur, mixed with some ecklamations and laughter, and that for a few moments seriously interfered with the general effect of the play's progress. If Miss Nethersole has returned with a repertoire of the same kind of plays as of old, she has returned with many modifications in her acting.

The supporting company is neither exceptionally good nor exceptionally bad. Hamilton Revelle is an actor of the old school man as ever. Charles Quartermaine has a not extensive range of emotion, but he makes opportunities for artistic work. Miss Louise Moody gives a sympathetic characterization of the heroine's mother.

Palace Theatre

"Sporty Widows" presents a splendid bill at the Palace Theatre this week. All who like good burlesque and vaudeville will enjoy the performance. The burlesques are entitled "Around the Matrimonial Bureau" and "Hotel Hurley-Burley," in which Al Patterson, Leo Stevens, James Dixon, Milton Schuster and Charles Phillips create the fun. Miss Bryant, Mattie Mills, Lillian Keeley, Miss Evelyn, Edith Randall and the Fisher Sisters contribute musical numbers. The olio presents the Jackson family of trick bicycle riders and exponents of physical culture; Hilton, the great juggler; the Lamont brothers, acrobats; the Norrisses, clever colored team, and others.

BIG HIPPODROME PLEASES EVERYBODY.

Hurrah for the circus!

Three thousand persons were carried back to the days of the green apple, the pink lemonade, the clown and the elephants and trick ponies, the living skeleton and fat lady, all under the circus tent — a real old country circus, with its side shows, its barkers, its gaping crowd of rubes and girls. They were seated in the Boston Theatre, but they forgot all about that. They were using the circus.

It was "The Yankee Circus" — all it was claimed and more — at the Hippodrome of Thompson and Dundy — the biggest thing of its kind Boston has ever seen. Think of 500 people on the stage at one time, to say nothing of twelve lions, eight elephants, and ponies innumerable, besides two clowns. And then the most wonderful ballet you ever saw — 144 girls, "count 'em," 144 — in "The Dance of the Hours," brilliant in color, intricate in movement, graceful, bewildering, fascinating. "The Yankee Circus" — all it was claimed and more — is the biggest of the world's greatest performances; plays a piano, kicks at an Irishman and finally walks into the lake. Maitland Terry is the clown, or, as Bessie Morgan, the Scotch lassie, who looks so much like Nat Goodwin, dances far better; and then there is Sam Bernard, "Sergeant Dick Deadeye" in "Hoity-Toity Man." A word of Harrison Hunter. They are all there, ever present with the flying in fact, "The Yankee Circus" is going to be the thing that everyone must see and have the children see. Theodora Irma Maitzeos are to be given daily.

Hurrah for the circus!

Three thousand persons were carried back to the days of the green apple, the pink lemonade, the clown and the elephants and trick ponies, the living skeleton and fat lady, all under the circus tent — a real old country circus, with its side shows, its barkers, its gaping crowd of rubes and girls. They were seated in the Boston Theatre, but they forgot all about that. They were using the circus.

It was "The Yankee Circus" — all it was claimed and more — at the Hippodrome of Thompson and Dundy — the biggest thing of its kind Boston has ever seen. Think of 500 people on the stage at one time, to say nothing of twelve lions, eight elephants, and ponies innumerable, besides two clowns. Adolph the clown does some rumbling that, it seems, must break every bone in his body, but it doesn't. He only smiles. Mlle. Marquis has a group of trained East Indian ponies that are graceful, intelligent and well managed. The lady, however, shows a decided lack of good taste and also an ignorance of the law in using a costume made of the Stars and Stripes during feats on the light and bounding wire are done by Chicedo and the Sisters D'Meros, and Colonel Bordeverry, the world's greatest marksman, plays a piano, kicks at an Irishman and finally walks into the lake. "M'FADDEN'S FLATS" BETTER THAN EVER

There is enough fun in "McFadden's Flats" to make three comedies. There is enough music, enough comic ideas, enough pretty scenery and enough pretty girls to supply a booking agent with material for at least ten good companies. Patrons of the Grand Opera House are well acquainted with "McFadden's Flats." They know every room in them. That is why the house was crowded yesterday. People knew they would get their money's worth and they did. This year's crops of fun makers includes Mlle. Fiorette, Joe Deming, Billy Barry, the Speck Brothers, Marie Henry, the Yellow Kid, May Baker, Fred Conlter, Alle Barbier, Annie Mailer, the Preston Sisters, Josie Adams, Helen Hall, Charles Gramlich and a chorus of thirty that is really attractive. "McFadden's Flats" will be on view all the week.

OLD FAVORITE PLAY REVIVED AT CASTLE

An old favorite play, "The Adventures of Lady Ursula," with an old favorite in each of the leading roles—Howell Hansell as the woman hater and Lillian Kemble as Lady Ursula—caused the Castle Square Theatre to be packed to the doors last evening. None of Anthony Hope's plays seem to have the human interest that this one does, for it tells of the adventures of one of the most novel musical acts of the season. William F. Allen, Will J. Cook and William Cunningham were also much in evidence. To Miss Carrie Elser belongs the palm as comedienne par excellence.

NEWSBOYS SEE THE "HAM TREE"

Young America had a monopoly of the second balcony of the Hollis Street Theatre last evening and enjoyed the performance of "The Ham Tree" to the utmost. All that part of the theatre had been purchased in a block by P. C. Hickey, the ticket agent, who gave the news boys of the city a good time at the cost of Vincent T. Fetherston and Frederick Howard, the boys' office men. The boys were a thoroughly representative class of the youngsters who sell papers on the street, and their young faces and happy looks made the gallery a wonderfully picturesque spot.

Columbia Theatre

It is a long time since the stage of the Columbia held so many young women of the "show girl" variety as "The Tiger Lilies" chorus. They are stunningly gowned and with more than the average ability to sing and dance. Ricky W. Craig, the Dutchman, kept the enthusiasm at the bubbling point, and in the who he gave one of the most novel musical acts of the season. William F. Allen, Will J. Cook and William Cunningham were also much in evidence. To Miss Carrie Elser belongs the palm as comedienne par excellence.

EMPIRE COMPANY DO 'CHARITY BALL' WELL

Score another big success for the Empire Theatre Stock Company. Yesterday the players of that organization appeared in the "Charity Ball," a play in four acts by David Belasco and H. C. DeMille and Robert Edwards. The parts were well allotted, and there was not a member of the company, who did not make a decided hit. William Brunwell gave a most careful interpretation of the rather difficult role of John Van Buren, and Minnie Belgrave was pleasing as Ann Cruger. The other characters were all well portrayed. Harry Corson Clarke is making a very truthful Dick Van Buren and Lillian Boyer a delightful Phyllis. The play was handsomely mounted, the scene showing the corridor of the Metropolitan Opera House being especially commendable. The present company is now set into excellent working order and will remain together and all give a gratifying feeling of sincerity to their work. Next week will be their final week at the Empire, however, a new stock company is to open there next Monday.

Lyceum Theatre

As usual, standing room was at a premium at the Lyceum Theatre, both matinee and night yesterday, and the "Golden Crook" extravaganza company was responsible. The organization boasts of forty people—count 'em. The opening burlesque is a spicy concoction called "Forty Five Seconds on Broadway." It is bright and breezy, short on plot, but long on pretty girls, dainty costumes, ambitious comedy, fine scenery and jingling music.

"THERESE RAQUIN" REEKS WITH TRAGEDY

Neither the most consummate art nor the highest skill in production can prevent "Therese Raquin"—from being a play of the gloomy, lowering variety. It is simply rank with tragedy, implied if not expressed, and from the rise of the curtain till the gas is turned down thereof there is always with one "the saber of the shadow." Did it not seem a jest, where none is intended, it would be entirely fitting to say that the answer to "Therese Raquin" is "What's the Face?"

The tragedy is a dramatization of Zola's novel by Harrison Grey Fiske, who has done away with all introduction and one of real, powerful, but not convincing acts. Four acts at times stand the test of initiative as well as the fifth of Zola, but in this fourth the issue of the latter injected in the play as presented at the Tremont Theatre last night by the Kalich and Kolker company is the climax. There is a small but excellent company, there is every reason why the theatre-goer should see a play which can possibly be taken except La Tosca and Camille.

The fourth act is the whole show, and not Miss Kalich and Henry Kolker, both of whom did a magnificent piece of acting, could not take away from Miss Jennie Lamar the honors which she had previously won.

But in this last act both Miss Kalich and Mr. Kolker measured up to every requirement. Their acting was marvelous. They did not convince, not from any lack of artistic ability, for this they possess, but purely because of the superficiality of the play. Another in the company worthy of mention was Miss Emily Stevens.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

Sensational five-act melodrama, "On the Bridge at Midnight," was pronounced favorably by the Bowdoin Square Tuesday yesterday. It is very effective in its pathetic passages and particularly strong in its colors and climaxes. A picturesque curiosity shop, a den in the metropolitan section of the city and a great bridge scene add to the fascinating interest. Heading the large company is Dan Hartland in the bright comedy role of Herman Shultzberg, while Miss Blossom Kennedy, Marshall Banks, Gertrude Libley and Florence Hale are all clever.

Globe Theatre

Keller, the great magician, began his second and last week at the Globe yesterday, offering some of the most intricate and perplexing experiments in Hindoo necromancy and magic ever presented in this city. Keller stands without a rival, and as he affords some new illusions which are even more interesting than those given in former seasons. He is doubly welcome. His new mystery this season has created a sensation. It is "The Witch, the Sailor and the Enchanted Monkey." Seven characters are outlined, who disappear at intervals.

CREATORE'S BIG HIT FEATURE AT KEITH'S

Creatore has had his hair cut. He looks a bit strange, but the loss of his locks has not dimmed his powers as a conductor—the greatest ever—nor had it dimmed the wonderful powers of his band. At Keith's yesterday Creatore and his band were the features, with what success may be judged when it is known that an even half-dozen encore pieces were given and enthusiasm was unbridled after the playing of the sextette from "Lucia." Somehow no one else but Creatore seems to be able to inoculate into a company of musicians such delicate effects of light and shade, such perfect ensemble, such intelligent interpretation.

Rose Hill at Keith's this week is particularly good in other headline features. Seventeen young men, calling themselves "Whip Cracks," give an amazingly skilful fancy drill act at flourishing accompaniment with a wall-eating feat. Laura Ordway, a little English comedienne, brings something new in her line and does it well. Harry Atkinson, "the Australian Orpheus," imitates musical instruments correctly. "Chalk" Saunders reveals his talent in drawing physiognomies. Dean Edsall and Arthur Forbes have a clever one-act sketch, and Charles H. Burke, Grace La Rue and the Inky Boys have another. Cook and Madison take good in a comedy acrobatic turn, and Viola and Engel do some barrel jumping that is hazardous.

BIG VARIETY AT AUSTIN & STONE'S

Bears, bulls, snakes, upside-down performers, right-side-up artists, marionettes, illusionists, monkeys and silver-tongued orators mingling in merry confusion crowded the platforms and exhibition spaces in the big curio hall at Austin & Stone's this week, yesterday to their capacity. The bears were the performing troupe belonging to Mlle. Carpentier. Julian is the upside-down man. He stood on his head and gave a song and dance turn on an improvised stage in mid-air. Banks, the big bull, tipping the beam at 1,600 pounds, was surrounded all day, and the Ballyras, after Houdini, performed cabinet tricks and escaped from bumpers and packing boxes. In the theatre the bill was new.

Roller Skating

Roller skating at the Park Square Rink is as popular as ever. The rink will be open all Summer. Music is furnished by Teel's Military Band. There are held three nights of each week. Monday nights are set apart for ladies' races, and Wednesday nights the amateurs put up an exciting race. Friday nights the usual professional race is held.

HENRY E. DIXEY BACK IN FINE NEW PLAY

A thoroughly first-class comedy, well acted by a clever star and a company of more than ordinary merit; this is "The Man on the Box," as presented at the Majestic Theatre this week by Henry E. Dixey. The play is a dramatization by Grace Livingston Furniss of Harold Macgrath's novel of the same name. The dramatist had a bright, interesting story on which to work, and dramatizing has improved it.

The part of Robert Warburton, the young Bostonian, who masquerades as a groom to win the girl he loves, fits Mr. Dixey and he fits the part. He walked on the stage in his coachman's livery last night looking hardly a day older than when he played "Adonis" almost two decades ago. All through the play he gives glimpses of the talent in a pantomimic line that helped him to success in that play.

Sidney Booth, in the part of Charles Henderson, Warburton's friend and the fiance of his sister, is exceptionally good. He is a son of Mrs. Agnes Booth-Schoeffel, who, as Agnes Booth, was for years a favorite with Boston theatregoers, and who sat in a box last night to watch her son's success. Oliver Doud Byron, another old Boston favorite, was excellent in the rather weak part of Colonel Annesley.

The leading woman's role, Betty Annesley, was in the hands of Miss Marie Nordstrom, and it could not have been in better. She is pretty, bright and vivacious, and her scenes with the pseudo groom were delightful. Miss Pauline Whitson as Nancy Warburton gave a charming impersonation of the volatile, flirty young daughter of Henderson, and Miss Edith Belowes and Miss Rose Braun were both entirely satisfactory.

HOWARD THEATRE HAS A GREAT BILL

It is a lively bill and one full of interest that the Old Howard offers this week. The famous Brothers Lyko, European equilibrists, are the headliners, while Murphy and Willard, in "The Prendegist," are just as popular as ever. William Cahill, the man from Ireland, has many new stories. Fields and Wolley, Zinnell and Bonfelle, the Three Musketeers, Allaire and Lloyd, Massey and Cramer, Spedden and Herson and Jean Beaugere, the protean character impersonator, make one of the best bills that the theatre has had in several seasons.

TROOPS FIRE ON MINERS; 17 MOWED DOWN

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 1.—Seventeen miners were mercilessly shot down by troops yesterday afternoon at Mt. Carmel in the first serious conflict between the State police and miners in the anthracite region. Four of the miners are dying, and two others, including a woman who was an onlooker, are in serious condition.

Last night the troopers, reinforced by thirty more, were entrenched behind the breakers of the Stone Colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, half a mile from the town, while John J. W. Page and forty men of Troop B left this city to aid the force and make a demonstration against the rioters to-day.

Following the closing of Saturday night, half of Troop C, under Lieutenant Smith, was sent to the scene. They reached Mt. Carmel yesterday morning, to find pickets of the miners on the streets awaiting their coming.

Lieutenant Smith led his men in a charge, and using their clubs, they beat back the pack and arrested two of the ringleaders. From this moment the excitement was intense. The troopers took their prisoners marched about the town searching for a magistrate, the mob following.

The two prisoners were finally committed, but the troopers were surrounded by a mob of 2,000. Fearing that his men would be overborne by the mob, Lieutenant Smith ordered them to draw their revolvers.

The sight of the weapons angered the mob still further and they replied with stones.

Then the shooting began. Fully 150 shots were fired, but the crowd did not waver.

Stubbornly and viciously it fought back with stones and an occasional revolver shot. Three times the troopers filled the chambers of their revolvers and not until the last cartridge was exhausted did they fall back and in good order gain the road leading to the colliery.

Rioting and bloodshed at Mount Carmel has been a bad blow to peace prospects. Union leaders here say to-day that Mount Carmel is the Lexington of the coming struggle.

NEWS OF LABOR.

No slate, tar or gravel roofing will be done by the members of Sheet Metal Workers' Union if the Roofers' Protective Union find it necessary to strike for a $\frac{1}{2}$5 cent increase for an eight-hour day. A resolution to this effect was passed at last night's meeting. The wages paid the roofers at present are: Helpers, $2.25 a day; gravel roofers, $2.50; all-round roofers, $3.00.

President John J. Hynes and Business Agent John F. Kennedy, delegates to the recent New England district convention, reported that a resolution had been passed requesting the international union to grant the Boston local financial aid to the fullest extent of its resources in forcing its demands for a minimum daily wage of $3.00 next August.

The matter of making a donation to the San Francisco sufferers was laid over until the next meeting, under its call.

ADDRESS BOOKBINDERS.

A large gathering listened to some interesting addresses on the benefits of organizing at a smoke-talk under the auspices of the Bookbinders' Union last night in Paine Memorial hall. Among the speakers were Representative J. Frank Gilbert of the Printers' Union, Oscar Hutsman, James A. Punch and Charles H. Wilkins of Boston Typographical Union No. 13, and L. D. Irving of Bookbinders' Union, who presided.

"Labor, belonging in the past, has awakened and taken up the duties of the hour," said Mr. Wilkins. "It is incumbent upon all men who work at a trade or profession to join that trade or profession, thereby lending their aid and assistance, and thus being aided in return."

After the speech-making, several applications for membership were received, which will be acted upon at the next regular meeting.

LABOR NOTES.

Carpenters' Union No. 33 was notified at last night's meeting that donations are being accepted for the P. J. Meloney fund. Mr. Meloney was late of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters.

Brass Workers' Union No. 38 has elected William Tucker floor director, James F. Wade, jr., assistant; Thomas Hall, chairman of the reception committee, and Joseph Hall, Jr., chairman of the social committee for the May 26 grand ball to-morrow night at Paine Memorial Hall.

WARD'S

Tip-Top Bread

—THE BREAD OF EXCELLENCE—

Is 100% Pure

At sunrise to-morrow there will be on sale in nearly every store in Greater Boston, where bread is sold, the ideal loaf of bread. It is so white, light, tasty, palatable and nourishing that it might well be called the baker's masterpiece.

It is unquestionably the best loaf of bread that is made in the country to-day. It is not alone the good materials—which are absolutely necessary—but knowledge, unceasing care, the use of improved machinery, and our own patent process that give results impossible to produce in any other way.

Thorough aeration and hydration of the flour fully develops the proteids, heretofore impossible, yielding 20% more gluten, and the nourishing element than could be developed by any other known process.

It is made under the direction of the most skilled bakers of the country—men who have devoted a life-time to the science of baking. It is manufactured from flour milled from the finest patent spring wheat—every ingredient is 100% pure. It is rich in milk, and in its manufacture every hygienic and sanitary law has been observed. It certainly costs us more to manufacture, but satisfied customers who insist on WARD'S TIP-TOP BREAD are ample reward for the increased expense. A heavy volume of business with a nimble sixpence is far better than small sales and large profits.

Our bakery, just completed, is one of the best equipped, up-to-date plants in the whole country. It is open to you, and we invite a critical inspection of our establishment, our methods, and the materials employed.

As it is true economy to purchase the best, even at a higher price, surely it is wisdom to buy WARD'S TIP-TOP BREAD, when it costs no more than any other. Try it, and your own good judgment will confirm every claim we have made for it.

Five Cents the Loaf

Fresh Every Sunrise at Your Grocer's

WARNING—Learn to discriminate. Things are not always what they seem. When purchasing WARD'S TIP-TOP BREAD, look for the TIP-TOP LABEL—the mark of excellence, which guarantees the best quality and absolute purity.

WARD-CORBY CO., CAMBRIDGE

FRISCO, HUNGER-MENACED, APPEALS FOR SUPPLIES

Food Nearly Exhausted, and Appalling Conditions Threaten City Unless Larger Relief Comes.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Hunger messages many thousands in this city unless additional help is forthcoming immediately.

Mayor Schmitz says that unless this help is received the city is in danger of becoming worse off than a week ago. Seven hundred carloads of food and supplies have been received and distributed since April 18, and the railway officials say they have only 165 more cars on the way.

"If this information is correct," said Mayor Schmitz, "we will soon be in a bad way. It is most unfortunate that reports should have been spread that we were amply supplied with money and food, for they are not the case.

"We lack both money and supplies, and must have them at once. We do not know how much money we can obtain for relief, and are handicapped in ordering supplies.

Food for Twenty-One Days.

"Mr. Phelan has been informed that part of the money that has been subscribed by individuals and companies in the East is being disbursed through private agents here. While it is true that contributions of money will be more to the purpose than contributions of supplies, I want it understood that, where cash is not available, anything will be most gratefully received."

Chairman Phelan of the Relief Committee said he had not received a reply to his telegram to Secretary of War Taft, asking how much it might expect out of the fund of $2,500,000 which Congress had appropriated. He had information that $300,000 was transmitted on Saturday by Mr. Taft was presented by him as President of the Red Cross and was not a contribution of the Government.

Basing his calculations on reports received within the last twenty-four hours, General Greely yesterday said that the entire available food supply, including shipments on hand and those on the way, would be sufficient, under the new ration plan, for the present destitute population for twenty-one days.

Thousands of Laborers.

General Greely announced that in response to the request from Mayor Mott of Oakland the distribution of supplies in that city probably would be placed under military supervision to-day.

Thousands of men have answered the advertisements for laborers, and to-day great numbers who were in comfortable circumstances before the earthquake are working with pick and shovel.

The work of rebuilding the city has begun in earnest. The Mayor sent a letter to the Board of Supervisors saying he will appoint a committee of engineers, architects, builders and lawyers to prepare schemes for laying out streets and boulevards and to formulate new building laws. Plans for thirty new buildings are awaiting the promulgation of the new regulations.

One of the best signs that order is rapidly arising out of chaos is the extension of the street car system. Cars were running briskly in all directions, and the Union Railway Company has promised to give the people of the city, within a short time, better transit facilities than existed before the fire.

FOURTH AMERICAN RELIEF TRAIN OFF THIS AFTERNOON

The fourth BOSTON AMERICAN and Salvation Army relief train leaves the North station to-day at 3 P. M. Train No. 4 carries food, clothing, household goods and medicines to the needy people of San Francisco, who remain in the stricken city and are determined to stick it out and build anew.

Another train hauling the relief car of the BOSTON AMERICAN and the Salvation Army will leave to-morrow if the goods are delivered in shed No. 10, docks 6 and 7, freight department of Mystic wharf, long division of the Boston & Maine railroad, before 2 P. M. The road will continue to haul relief to San Francisco as long as the people of Boston and New England contribute their goods.

To facilitate the work of forwarding the supplies, the relief bureau of the BOSTON AMERICAN should be promptly notified, and an express wagon will call for the contribution. Main 2100 is the telephone address of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

To insure safe and prompt delivery of your gift be careful that it is directed as follows:

For the
San Francisco Sufferers,
Via Boston American Relief Train,
Fitchburg Div., B. & M. R. R.
Boston, Mass.

Deliver at Freight Depot No. 10, Doors 6 and 7, Warren Bridge.

Canned goods, clothing, household furniture and medicines are the articles most needed.

The BOSTON AMERICAN, in continuation with the Salvation Army, has organized headquarters for the work of relief and headquarters in Boston.

In San Francisco and in Boston.

Whatever contributions are sent to the relief train will be forwarded with dispatch to the needy sufferers.

The response of Boston and New England people has been liberal and enthusiastic to the appeal of the BOSTON AMERICAN to help their fellow citizens in San Francisco.

And the people of San Francisco are meeting, by their undaunted determination to build anew the city of the Argonauts, that generosity of New England has been well given.

Contributions will be received at all branches of the Salvation Army in and around Boston, and forwarded to the relief train.

Any express company in your neighborhood will deliver free at the train whatever you may be moved to donate. Therefore,

NEW SONG SOLD BY AMERICAN TO HELP 'FRISCO SUFFERERS

"My Home in the Old Bay State" is the title of a new song which is being sold for the benefit of the fund to relieve the earthquake sufferers in California. The song is a hit. Its sale promises to add a substantial sum to the relief fund. Copies are on sale at the office of the BOSTON AMERICAN. Orders will be received by mail at fifteen cents a copy. The song will be at once forwarded postage free.

"My Home in the Old Bay State" is the first of what are known as State songs, for the old Commonwealth of Massachusetts. On the eve of Old Home Week, it is having many demands made for it.

The song is by G. H. Sewell and Don Ramsay, the author of the popular "Tommy." It tells a pretty story set to catchy music.

BOOTBLACK STAND OWNER GIVES DAY'S RECEIPTS TO FUND

By shining shoes Frank Perricon of No. 290 Tremont street, has raised $10 for the fund to relieve the earthquake sufferers in San Francisco. Mr. Perricon conducts a first-class bootblacking establishment at that address, and the amount contributed by him so generously, represents the total receipts of one day's business, without deducting expenses.

L. STARR & CO. GIVE 10 PER CENT. OF SALES FOR NEXT 10 DAYS

To help along the fund for the relief of people of the stricken district of California, L. Starr & Co., 1 Hanover street, will give 10 per cent. of the sales for the next ten days to the Red Cross Society.

$10 FROM NEWSBOYS OF PROVIDENCE FOR HEARST RELIEF FUND

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 1.—The BOSTON AMERICAN newsboys of Providence have forwarded a check for $10 to the Hearst Relief Fund, representing 15 per cent. of their earnings last Saturday.

Nat Koulsky, spokesman for the boys, said when he gave the check to Circulation Agent Max Silverstein to be forwarded: "We expect to do more next Saturday."

$100 FROM NEWSBOYS' UNION TO SWELL HEARST RELIEF FUND

An even $100 was turned over to the Hearst Relief Fund to-day by the union newsboys of Boston as result of their donation of ten per cent of last Friday's sales. Boston Newsboys' Protective Union voted to give this ten per cent. of all money taken in on that day. They insisted harder than ever and for every dime received, put aside one cent for the Hearst Relief Fund. When the total collected it was given to the treasurer of the Hearst fund. The total counted $10. The union committee in charge of the work consisted of Nathan S. Chapman, chairman; Aaron Baronsky and Charles Fraser.

AMERICAN RELIEF FUND.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN fund to relieve the sufferers of the San Francisco earthquake is growing at a rapid rate, through the generosity of the people of Boston, quick to respond to the call for help from the stricken district.

From all sides money is pouring in. Some of the sums are large and some are small, but all are equally welcome for the good work.

The undiminished generosity of the public is shown by the variety of sources from which the contributions come, little to the complete Hearst Relief Fund up to date, with the Boston contributions in detail:

New York and other cities	$100.00
Hon. [illegible]	$150,762.00
J. Henry Smith, New York	10,000.00
William Randolph Hearst	5,000.00
Mrs. Phoebe Hearst	5,000.00
Boston contributions previously acknowledged	6,249.60
Houghton & Dutton	100.00
James H. Cook, Woonsocket, R. I.	47.00
Osterberg	5.00
Hank Perrison	10.00
Grand total	$212,174.29

BAY STATE FUND NOW $691,962.57

The Massachusetts fund for the relief of the San Francisco sufferers, as announced by Kidder, Peabody & Co. last night, is now $691,962.57.

PLAN CONCERT AND DANCE FOR HEARST FRISCO RELIEF FUND

Tickets are selling rapidly for the concert and dancing party which the employes of the Ideal Neckwear Company are to give for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers, the proceeds to be added to the Hearst fund. Over eighty girls are interested in making the even a success both socially and financially.

The concert and dance will be held on Wednesday night, May 16, in Minot Hall, West Springfield street. Miss Belle Baum is the treasurer, William Tark is the chairman of the dance committee and Miss Bessie Sake is to be chief marshal.

CURE OF CONSUMPTION.

Senator Chase offers a resolve in the Senate to establish a commission to consider a site for a hospital for the cure of persons in an advanced stage of consumption.

EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

LULL IN BALLOTING ON TEACHERS' TOURS

BOSTON CANDIDATES SHIFT, BUT CAMPAIGNERS REST IN OTHER DIVISIONS.

There was a lull yesterday in the balloting for teachers to receive the forty Summer European tours and $1,000 in cash prizes offered by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN after the record-breaking voting of two days.

The leaders in all of the divisions made only modest gains and consequently but few changes were made in the listed standing of the candidates.

PILGRIMS' LAST GAME IN NEW YORK TO-DAY

YOU'RE a lovely sort of town,
Boston, Massachusetts;
Yet I view you with a frown,
Boston, Massachusetts.
When I was a tiny kid
I perused the things you did
To escape the British lid,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Thou, and those who clung to thee,
Boston, Massachusetts,
Threw away a lot of tea.
Boston, Massachusetts.
To avoid that English yoke
You eventually went broke,
And we worshipped you—no joke—
Boston, Massachusetts.

Clearly can I understand,
Boston, Massachusetts,
Why you fought King George's band,
Boston, Massachusetts;
That was many years ago,
Will you kindly tell me, though,
Why you maul the Yankees so,
Boston, Massachusetts?

Giants' Manager Has Cut Out Former "Loud-Mouthedness"

M'GRAW QUIET ON BALL FIELD NOW

BY MORTON BIRGE.

It was a sure "nuff midsummer day's dream, with Muggsy McGraw roaring like a sucking dove.

"I will roar you," quoth Nick Bottom, "an't were any nightingale."

Even a nightingale or the sucking dove might pass a modest "damn" once in a game, especially if he were captain of the New York Giants. That would show the proper interest in the game.

And if the one mildly wise word that Muggsy McGraw used in his coaching at the Boston-New York National game yesterday was surely the limit of eloquence.

At the top level there's plenty of grumbling when they want to break up the wait between acts, some young man who probably "doubles" three speaking lines and a tenor solo, will wait for encores and warble dolefully. "If you love me, Darling, tell me with your eyes."

Loves Giants to Death.

By the same token Muggsy McGraw loves the Giants to death. He tells them considerable with his mouth on the side lines and on the players' bench—quite "genuine," you know, but he tells them a darn sight more with his snapping black eyes.

So far as the opening game between the Boston and New York yesterday was concerned, the happy, scrappy, howling "Go get 'em Giants" game was well eyed nuff' time of talk that McGraw has so often handed out has been left behind in the hotel.

There was coaching, of course, but the manager of the Giants, if he does flax the feelings of his men when they don't play to suit him, does it in the dressing room.

The only time he may have talked violently during this game so far as could be known—must have been when he was having scrabble with "Dummy" Taylor. As that was in finger talk, it didn't shock the fans.

All the first inning Muggsy warmed the bench, talking in low tones to his Giants. In the second inning he walked out toward his coaching place of third base. Umpire refused to be coaxed by Pfeffer's curves and took a walk. "That's it, that's it," shouted Muggsy over to him.

He stooped down in his favorite coaching attitude, with head on either knee, crisp commands came now and then—

"Very well, it very well look out, watch the play—come on, come on."

Devlin walked slowly down, everything's lovely here," said McGraw mockingly to Pfeffer. Then they got two on bases. Brennahan at bat. Bresnahan smashed at a curve and missed. "Stick to it, stick to it," called out Muggsy, keeping one eye on Bresnahan and the other on the three runners on Devlin and Dahlen, who were hoping to steal in.

Finally Bresnahan went out and Muggsy smiled lightly and came back to the bench.

"Going to Take Whole Series?"

"Going to take the whole series?" asked a friend from the grand stand.

"I'm, me—guess so," said McGraw with a cheerful grin.

That's about the way it went. McGraw cracked out a single. "Take your time" yelled McGraw, as McGann dogged to and fro at first. Then the side went out. "Come on, hurry up, little boys" said McGraw to his Giants. And the champions trotted out.

In the seventh, as McGann picked up his bat, McGraw said: "Now see if you can't give us a run," speaking with cheering emphasis to his first baseman.

It was in the seventh that the Giants bunched them. When the third safe one was cracked out the excitable Muggsy jumped up from the players' bench, sang out "Woo, woo, woo-o-o-o-o!" and then all the time. Had 'em up our sleeve." Then he grabbed a bat and lunged the grandstand front joyfully.

Feeling pretty kinky by this time he smacked a glancing blow at "Dummy" Taylor, saw the latter was looking the other way and deftly tapped "Dummy" on the shin.

"Ow!" howled Dummy," shaking on plentiful fingers at his manager. McGraw said something on his fingers—the whole team talks deaf and dumb alphabet, you know, and Taylor scooped something back on his fingers and then sat down grumbling to himself—on his fingers.

McGraw Took Things Lightly.

In the eighth and ninth McGraw took things lightly. He complacently watched his men get their seventh and eighth run in. "Dummy" toddle out on the coaching line.

"Hink, hink, hink" chortled "Dummy," clapping his hands, tum, tum, tum-tum-tum; tum, tum, tum-tum-tum, in great glee.

"Hit 'em out" called McGraw from the bench.

"Hink, hink, hink" chortled "Dummy" in his inner talk-fest, then clap, clap, clap-clap, went his hands.

It was "O, my Judge" for the Giants and McGraw was all to the honey vote.

Muggsy is the strict manager, as he ever was, but his coaching language now wouldn't even make a perfect lady mad so far as the grandstand could hear it.

VANDERBILT'S BIG AUTO MAY COME TO THE HUB

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The eight-cylinder machine which was constructed by Paul Sartori for Alfred Vanderbilt and which proved such a disappointment at the Ormond race meet last January, is now in the market.

A possible purchaser is located here in Boston. It is doubtful, however, after the poor exhibition the car put up on the Florida beach anything like the good price will be received for the same. The car did not travel a full mile at any stage of the game. In order to bring it down to weight for the big race the radiator and other essential features had to be removed, one of the engines also. Even then it was not what is called an Experts say the car has a big motor in ways than one. Perhaps it may be reconstructed and getting into shape for the coming Vanderbilt road race, but its future is decidedly problematic.

The first meeting of the touring committee of the American Automobile Association was held in New York on Friday. The Glidden and other proposed tours were discussed and considered at length. The action of the committee will not, however, be made public until some later date. The plans for the tours will be formally announced. Chairman Paul has secured a Western route for the tour this year, he believing that greater good would result from the sending of the tourists through a new territory than by repeating the route of a year ago. The rule for the same has been given over to a special committee.

Sam Miles, manager of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers is in session here as he has been all the Automobile Show. Management. While in Atlantic City recently he sought for information from several Boston men, but singular though it may seem, not one of them knew anything about the vital question. The fact that the recent automobile show in this city had an attendance of 125,000 during the week seems to signal considerably to those powers that be in the National Association. It certainly indicates the great interest that is taken in motoring in this city.

W. T. Heifer, who has ever been prominent in the affairs of the Bay State Automobile Association, has been appointed a member of the Standing House Committee. He like his fellows is anxious to commence the work of placing the new club quarters in condition for use.

Secretary of State Dickinson of New Jersey has named Edward Johnson of Jersey City as chief inspector of the new automobile department, of which the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Smith, is made the head by the Bedlinghuysen bill passed by the last Legislature. The other inspectors are yet to be named. The department will be fully organized by May 1, and automobilists are urged to register their machines early to avoid the rush that is expected just prior to July 1, when the new law goes into effect, and when all old licenses will become invalid.

LINDAMAN SLATED TO FACE GIANTS TODAY

Can the Tennyites possibly beat a perfect organization like the Giants?

It's about a five to one shot, but the eighth rate Trolley Dodgers did the trick and there ought to be a chance, even if it is very small.

To-day Tenney's men will, for the second time, endeavor to accomplish the feat, but it's a big proposition.

Though the local Nationals only won three out of twenty-two games with the Giants last season it is no reason why they shouldn't improve on that performance.

The Giants are meeting along at a slashing gait and appear harder than a year ago to trip up. Every player is on his toes from start to finish, no matter what the score is and they never tire piling up the runs.

The team is without the services of its star Matheson, but the rest of the force is in the finest trim.

Dummy Taylor is the choice for the box work to-day and there may be an opening. If the speedster gets his curves crossed,

Lindaman is slated to fool the New Yorkers, if he can, and the New Jersey man is likely to be a stumbling block.

It was a rattling bout for the Giants in the first game. Pfeffer could not have suited them better, while Ames was almost untouchable.

LINCOLN CLUB BENEFIT BOUTS ON THURSDAY

On Thursday night the Lincoln Club will hold a show which should prove intensely interesting, as the boys who are engaged in the show are sure to give satisfaction.

The main bout, between Kid Pants and Young Kemp, is sure to be a corking one from the start. These boys boxed at the benefit at the Hub, and although pretty warm, each scoring a knockdown when Referee Ian Donnelly stepped in, afterwards they had a wordy spar in the dressing room, with the result that the present match was arranged.

Young Kemp proved in his bout with Jack Sidney that he is a hard hitting boy that, and Joe Ryan and other sports from the Mill City will be ready with their handrolls to bet that the Lowell boy wins.

Kid Pants has always had a big following locally, and he will have the North End in evidence when he puts on the gloves. The boys box fifteen rounds for a decision, with Maffit Flaherty as referee.

In the opening preliminary Jimmy Nilson and Young Kiley will box six rounds for the championship of Lawrence, and the second preliminary will have a rough card in Joe Geary and Tomale Mack.

The Lincoln Club has made arrangements to have the show act as a benefit for the San Francisco sufferers, and from the proceeds the members' assessments being given to the Chelsea relief committee.

CHARLEY NEARY WON FIGHT WITH BRIGGS

A new ring star came out of the West last night at the Lincoln A. C., when Charley Neary of Milwaukee won the decision over Jimmy Briggs at the end of fifteen as warm rounds as the fans would want to see.

That the result was a surprise there was little doubt, as Briggs reigned a 10 to 8 favorite before the bags got in the ring. And what was still more startling to those who have followed the career of the Chelsea blacksmith was the fact that he acted by weakened from the onslaught that Neary administered.

After the bout Briggs said that he broke his right hand in the fourth round and could not use it.

Briggs was thought to possess unlimited power, but he had the steam taken out of him by the forearms of Neary's body smashing, and at different stages could hardly hold up his handle, while his legs were wobbling underneath him.

CHAPIN, YALE CATCHER, IS HURT IN GAME

NEW HAVEN, May 1.—Yale is shy a catcher for her baseball nine, as Chapin was badly injured in the Yale-Columbia game last Saturday. He tried to slide to third base and collided with Wilcox, the Columbia base guardian, and was picked up and taken to the Yale bench, pitcher Pratt replacing him on the bases. After the game he did not recover, and he was kept at New York city. He has not returned.

First baseman Ted Jones, the former Exeter catcher, will replace him behind the bat, going to West Point to-morrow in consequent of that position. Substitute Taylor will probably be given first base. Chapin's injuries were to his head and shoulders.

WEST TO HAVE NO BIG GAMES

CHICAGO, May 1.—Michigan, Wisconsin and Chicago university elevens will not meet one another next Fall. This action limits the schedules of the three universities to games of minor interest, and shelves the most interesting football games of the middle west. The new rule is made in the interest of "pure sport."

BENEFIT NETS OVER $700

The sporting fraternity benefit for the San Francisco sufferers at the Hub Theatre on Saturday netted more than $700. There are still some outstanding accounts, and when these have been received the whole net sum realized from the benefit will be acknowledged through the newspapers.

The benefit was one of the best of its kind ever held in Boston, and the sports who were present got their moneys' worth many times over. Billy Pierce, who managed the show, and Miah Murray, chairman of the committee having the affair in charge, deserve a lot of credit for the successful outcome of the benefit.

Is It Right to Label All Women With the Badge of Their Matrimonial Condition, or SHOULD ALL WOMEN BE CALLED "MRS."?

Dorothy Dix Says Unmarried Women Nowadays Are the Envy of Married Sisters, and Spinsterdom Has Lost Its Former Stigma.

BY DOROTHY DIX

In a recent number of this paper, Stake Marvel Prelude's proposition that all grown up women assume the honorable title of "Mrs." whether they are married or not, was discussed from the standpoint of the practical business woman who finds it a disadvantage to go about her affairs with the label of "Spinster" tacked on her.

Undoubtedly, women would like to be put on the same plane with men so far as a handle to their name is concerned, and would embrace with enthusiasm a title that was as nondescriptive of whether they were double or single as "Mr." is of their brothers.

No old bachelor would like to have his celibacy proclaimed even before his name, and a woman has still less relish for having the fact that she is an old maid announced to every chance acquaintance she makes.

Still, for all that common sense commends the substitution of "Mrs." for "Miss" in addressing a woman of mature age, it is not likely that the custom will be changed in our day.

In the meantime, however, the unmarried women of to-day are doing so much to glorify the title of old maid that it is fast passing into the class of distinctions and becoming a badge of honor instead of the sign of a left over.

The Old Maid of 1876

Old Maids Envied

Nay, more, instead of being pitied by every woman who had annexed to herself any job lot sort of a man, the old maid is frankly envied by every married woman except the minority who have drawn capital prizes in the matrimonial lottery.

Whenever you want to get a line on whether the world moves or not, just sit down and calmly contemplate the lot of the unmarried woman past and present—the old maid as she used to be, and the old maid as she is to-day.

In the past, when the curious and perverted notion prevailed that it was more honorable for a woman to marry for her bread and butter than to earn it herself, there was just cause why some stigma should be attached to being an old maid.

It was mortifying, because it proclaimed to the world that the spinster either was less attractive than her married sisters, and that she was so little desirable that no man would have her, or else she was too proud and stupid enough to want her.

Talk about your martyrs! Talk about the inquisition! Talk about the sufferings of the faithful burned at the stake! They were no whit worse than the agony of souls of delicate sensitive, refined women forced into loveless marriages, often into unequal ones, for the sake of escaping the lonely old maid's lot.

No More Dependent

There is an old joke at which people have laughed for a hundred years about the woman, who, when she was a young girl, importuned Heaven to send her a husband who was young and handsome and gallant, but who, year by year, modified her demands, until at last she only prayed, "send me anybody, good Lord, send me anybody."

To me there is no laughter in that story. It is salt with the tears of a gentle, disappointing woman, who had seen their hopes fade, their ideals crumble, and who stood in the dark, calling for the return of the lesser of two evils, for on one side stood just any sort of a husband they could get, and on the other dependence.

That was the rub. Dependence, unless the unmarried woman was rich, there was nothing for her but to be a hanger-on of some relative.

She was supposed to have no taste, no hopes, no joys and sorrows of her own.

No Old Maid Jokes

To-day no woman needs to marry for a living. Every woman in the land is as free to gratify her taste in the kind of a husband she selects as she is in the style of a Spring hat.

No odium is attached to being an old maid, because a woman does not marry nowadays it is because she prefers not to or doesn't happen to find the man she fancies. No idiot is daft enough to think she couldn't marry.

Nobody dreams of getting funny at the expense of an unmarried woman now.

The old maid of to-day offers no angles on which to hang a caricature. She is, as a class, far, far better off physically and financially than her married sisters.

She is more and more smarter dressed, none better read, or more intelligent, none more eagerly sought after in society, and every good thing that the independent, broad-minded woman who for some reason of their own have no fit to marry.

Therefore, it matters little whether the single woman of mature age is called "Mrs." or "Miss." She is IT, the either way.

And the Old Maid of 1906

Good Men Value Modesty in a Girl Above All Else

By Beatrice Fairfax

A short time ago while dining in the street. Loud laughter and bold behavior are ill-bred.

Don't let your eyes rove about challenging the stare of every man you meet.

It is no compliment to be spoken to by a strange man. It does not mean that he admires you, but simply that he thinks you approachable, that you will not resent his impertinence.

You can't expect a man to treat you with respect unless you behave yourself in such a manner as to command it.

Keep the young men at a proper distance. Be as jolly and pleasant and friendly with them as possible, but allow no liberties.

There is no saying more true than that "familarity breeds contempt."

Men will always flock around the girl who allows them to be familiar, but they will shun her mentally and turn to the girl whom they are obliged to treat with honor and respect.

You can't look sweet and modest unless you really are so and oh, dear girls, if you have the chance of that look you would try hard to keep it.

There is something pure and holy about the men facing womanhood.

Any man whose opinion is worth a row of sticks will tell you that all good men value nobility and innocence above all qualities in a girl.

Don't fill your minds with trashy, loudly-written novels. They will do you no good, in fact, they will do you infinite harm. They represent life in a distorted, hideous way, and many a girl's nature is utterly warped by the ideas she has imbibed from their lurid pages.

Be good and sweet, dear girls, and keep the beauty and freshness of your youth unsullied as long as possible.

Worldly wisdom and disillusion will come soon enough, don't go half-way to meet them.

HINTS TO THE HOUSEKEEPER

CLEANING LACE

Cream-colored lace can be cleaned and made to look like new by rubbing it in dry flour, not as if washing it in water. Then take it outdoors and shake all the flour out; if not perfectly clean repeat the rubbing in a little more clean flour. The flour must be very thoroughly shaken from the lace, or the result will be far from satisfactory. White knitted beads can be cleaned in this way; babies' socks also, if only slightly soiled.

SOAP THE BOILER.

One often hears complaints that the boiler rusts and rots and ruins the clothes. This may be easily prevented by rubbing the boiler, directly it is emptied and while still warm, with any good household soap. Give it a good coating of soap, for the soap will not only prevent rust, but will help to make the water when the boiler is filled for the next washing day.

Spring Vegetables Are Now Prime

This is the beginning of the vegetable season. Every housekeeper should buy the newest and supply them as plentifully as it is possible. Before cooking vegetables of all kinds should be thoroughly picked over, throwing out all decayed or rotten parts, then well washed in several waters.

Most vegetables, when peeled, are better when laid in cold water a short time before cooking. When partly cooked a little salt should be thrown into the water in which they are boiled, and they should cook steadily after they are put on, but allowed to stop boiling or simmering until they are thoroughly done.

Every sort of culinary vegetable is much better when freshly gathered and cooked as soon as possible, and, when done, thoroughly drained and served immediately while hot.

Onions, cabbage, carrots and turnips should be cooked in a great deal of water, boiled or stewed enough to sufficiently cook them, and immediately drained. Longer boiling makes them insipid in taste and to look with too little water they turn a dark color.

Potatoes rank first in importance in the vegetable line and consequently should be properly served. It requires some little intelligence to cook even so simple and common a dish as boiled potatoes in the first place, all defective or green ones should be cast out; a bad one will flavor a whole dish. If they are not uniform in size, they should be made so by cutting after they are peeled.

The best part of a potato, or the most nutritious, is next to the skin, therefore they should be pared very thinly, if at all; then, if old, the cores should be cut out, thrown into cold water, boiled a little, and boiled until soft enough for a fork to pierce through easily, drain immediately, and replace the kettle on the fire with the cover partly removed, until they are completely dried.

New potatoes should be put into boiling water, and when partly done salted a little. Several hours' time for cooking is what most people consider sufficiently cooking by scraping off the thin outside skin. Then, and immediately drained. Longer boiling makes them insipid in taste and to boil.

Behind the Locked Door

"MR. WYNTER is on the 'phone."

The clerk made the announcement in the normal expressionless business voice that he would have used in referring to any trivial event of the day's routine utterly in the dark as to the tremendous significance with which the simple words were fraught to his employer, and equally unprepared for the effect on Philip Haggard of so ordinary an occurrence as a telephone message from the senior partner.

Haggard swayed unsteadily; had he not clutched the table on which he had been sitting he would have fallen. His face took on the clerk's announcement was the last in the world that he had expected to hear. That he was going to meet Robert Wynter wished to speak with him on the eve of the last night!

"Impossible!" he cried hoarsely. "What do you mean? Is this a trick? It can't be true." The drawing aside of his clerk's face brought him to his senses, and he realized that he was on the verge of betraying himself. With an effort he forced himself to calmness and said: "I mean is, Mr. Wynter's boat was due out some hours ago, it is now ten. You've made some mistake."

Delayed starting, sir," Mr. Wynter said in getting the message for you," replied the clerk.

"You seemed quite excited, Mr. Haggard," said Herries, looking at him in surprise. "Anyhow, it's a relief to know Wynter is safe. Aren't you going to speak to him?"

For Haggard was standing as one stunned still.

At the words he moved toward the telephone like a man in a dream. He could hear Robert Wynter far at the other end of the telephone! And yet, unless the clerk were in some conspiracy against him, the man believed that the speaker was the senior partner.

Mechanically Haggard lifted the receiver, spoke the necessary words and listened for the answer. If his hand shook as he took the receiver, it grew steady to start as the first words reached his ears. It was Wynter speaking! That was plain by recognizable, despite the change a telephone makes in the voice. It was Robert Wynter's voice that uttered the stern words:

"Your one chance of safety lies in acting as though nothing had happened. Do you understand? I have my own reasons for taking this course—but out of any consideration for you. Now your breach ers and the murderous blow you dealt me, you know very well, is chalked up to my abbreviation.

"Obey my instructions implicitly; it is your one chance. I have already made arrangements to have you watched. Attempt to fly, and the consequences will be fatal to yourself."

"I shall go mad in trying to solve this cursed enigma," he told himself hoarsely. "If Robert Wynter had escaped, would he have made scathless after all that had happened? What possible special reason could he or any man have in sparing me? I believed in ghosts I could almost persuade myself that it was Robert Wynter's spirit that called me through the 'phone."

Worst of All

The little station was reached at last. With a set face Philip Haggard walked to his house.

He turned into the drive; the square, ivy-grown tower that rose at the north end of the building met his eyes. It loomed, though the edge of the mystery of the night, like a friend to him now, he would be able to prove definitely that it could not have been the living Robert Wynter who had sent him that inexplicable message.

Philip Haggard let himself into the house. He walked through the hall and up the stairs, meeting no person observed by a fever of impatience to refute or counten his doubts.

As he inserted the curiously shaped key in the lock Olga Vail came silently to the door of a room opening on the corridor and watched him intently. But Philip Haggard did not look back on the voice of Robert Wynter speaking to him on the 'phone, and the speaker had referred to what only Robert Wynter could possibly have known!

Haggard flung the door open. The impossible had happened, that Robert Wynter had resolved and found strength and means to escape, could be possibly have reached New York before the steamer was due to start?

A Ghost in Reality

Yes, it was possible, but a man struck down by such a blow as Robert Wynter had received? The things was impossible, unthinkable.

Haggard strode out of the office. He felt that unless he settled or confirmed his doubts quickly the intolerable suspense would drive him mad. He called a longing cab and drove to the Grand Central. And all the time, as the cab rattled to the station, he was mentally trying to calculate the time for the train, the words that had come to him by telephone in that well-known voice hammered at his brain:

"Your one chance in safety lies in acting as though nothing had happened. I have my own special reasons for taking this course. Attempt to fly, and the consequences will be fatal to yourself."

"I shall go mad in trying to solve this riddle," he told himself hoarsely.

Jack Harkaway's Son

CHAPTER XLV.

Life or Death

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner.

There was no longer time to feign death.

Jack leaped to his feet, and with a quick movement wrenched the sword from Grierson's hands.

The next instant a terrible blow from his left hand sent that astonished seaman spinning to a corner of the cabin.

Like a flash Grierson from his surprise speedily and made a rush at Jack, but it would have been better for him if he had attacked a tiger.

Jack seized him by the throat and sent him sprawling his full length on the floor.

He held all the iron support of a berth as he went down, and the blow rendered him harmless for the remainder of the fight in the cabin. Grierson had not suffered so severely, however, and was now again on his feet.

He came at Jack with a drawn pistol, but Jack dropped to the floor like a shot, and when he came up he brought Grierson's feet with him.

As a result the shipper's head collided rather heavily with the floor.

He was groggy when he regained his feet, and a rap on the point of the chin suffered to put him out of the fighting.

Jack lost no time in taking advantage of his triumph.

He ripped the bed clothing into strips and twisted them into strong ropes, and, with a few deft motions, bound up the arms of Grierson so that there seemed no possibility of escape.

Then he stepped to the door of the cabin, where he instantly met the angry countenance of the cook, supposing a frightened and disorganized mob.

"Men," said Jack, shortly, "things have changed on this ship, and I am master here. If you don't believe it, look at your two officers."

There was a murmur of surprise and gratification for the crew hated Grierson and only feared Dan through fear.

Of them had ever sailed with him before, believed he was never able to keep a proper seaman beyond the next port if there was any chance of escape, and only three or four of the petty officers remained faithful to him through all his cruises.

Jack saw that his foes was welcome, and he took instant advantage of it.

"This cruise would have landed you all in the gallows, in all likelihood," he continued, "if you had followed it with Grierson for skipper. Now I am going to take this boat into the nearest American port and let you all go home. What valuables there are on board will be divided among you, provided you are faithful to me. But if you make a move, however small, means the death of those who take part in it. I am playing a desperate game, and I ask for your safety. Now, if any of you think conditions were better under Grierson, I'll step on deck and reward him."

There was a second's muttering among the crew, then a cool and calm voice said,

"Speak up," said Jack, "if any of you want to go back to things as they were now is the time to say so. Whoever is dissatisfied can be treated mercifully and allowed to remain below till we get to port. But if this offer of fair dealing breaks out later it will go hard with him!"

"Don't believe him, boys; he means to scuttle the ship and murder us all!" cried Grierson, inside the cabin.

The men hesitated. The terrible voice of their old skipper still exercised a strange power over them.

They began talking among themselves in low tones.

Jack preserved an outwardly calm demeanor, but his heart was beating heavily in his breast.

Upon this conference of ignorant men, half hypnotized by their old commander, depended his life and the lives of others on board the ship, save only Grierson.

For Jack knew that after this outbreak the old man would find some means of putting all out of death before he dropped anchor in the next port.

What would the men decide upon?

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

A BAD HABIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for the past year and during that time he has never missed an evening without coming to see me. I love him dearly, and I know he loves me, but the only fault I find with him is he makes me promises which he never keeps, and also tells things which are not true. I never can believe him.

Would you advise me to marry a man like this, or do you think it best to break off my engagement, which, if I did, I am afraid, would result seriously.

There are two very bad habits, but he could cure himself of both easily enough. You would not be very happy married to a man whom you could neither believe nor rely on. Why don't you put him on trial for a while and see if in six months he has not improved. Tell him you cannot marry him until he cures himself of these faults.

CROWD OF 1000 HOLD UP AMERICAN GREEN AUTO

WILLIAM NISBIT OF ROXBURY WINS $50 PRIZE AND IS CHEER ED BY RIVALS.

In one of the most exciting finishes that the green automobile of "The Great Auto Chase" has ever had Written Nisbit of No. 383 Warren street, Roxbury, captured the $50 prize for holding up a copy of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN of April 22, when he stopped the car at Massachusetts avenue and Prospect street, Cambridge, at 5:14 yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Nisbit was one of perhaps 1,000 people who gathered at the corner and endeavored at the appointed time and place to be the first to bring the green auto to a halt.

So many were holding the fort at one point that the problem of awarding the prize was exceedingly difficult.

Seldom has Central square held such a crowd and that which was present was automobile. Each was armed with a copy of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN containing the first prize story. Each watched every automobile in Central Square, fearful lest that no automobile should pass without giving an account of itself.

Some of those who waited for the green machine went to the appointed place at noon. After that there was trouble for the automobile endeavored to get past. Each was held up, examined with care and allowed to go only when assured that it was not the machine which bore the representative of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

No one apparently was annoyed by the interruption. No one took it with bad nature. The crowd was forgiving of the earnestness to win the prize offered by the BOSTON AMERICAN appreciated the efforts of those held up.

It was lastly 5:14 when the green auto of the BOSTON AMERICAN from the Columbia Motor Vehicle Company, 1754 Stanhope street, Boston, where J. H. MacAlman is the electrician that put the machine, swung into Central square from Western avenue. There, standing on the step of the wheel and his guidance of the car was a superb exhibition of cool generalship, Ha ally had the lid car come out of the air machine before the other prizes were. They seemed to come from every side. BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN prizes thrust into the faces of the occupants of the machine. On every side rose the cry.

"Here, Mr. Nisbit!"

In that crowd were women and men, boys and girls. The moment the signal stopped they crowded round, pushed, shoved, screamed, for each of the cars. Back of them were eager hands. Loud voices rose in the din.

Tenacious, gripping the side of the car by the BOSTON AMERICAN.

CHAPTER XVII.

CULBERSON gallantly placed a chair for his visitor and himself into it wearily, throwing her veil aside as she did so. It was Kate Pierce.

"Well, Kate," he said, "so you did consider it necessary to pay attention to my summons?"

"Yes," she answered, adding in a low voice: "I received the wire and saw the cipher advertisement. I met Mr. Davis in the auto and he brought me here. Why won't you leave me in peace? Your name brought enough misery into my life without pursuing me further? Without continually harassing me?"

"Frankly, my dear girl," Culberson replied easily, "I pursue you, as you express it, because I find you are of great assistance to me."

The woman turned miserable eyes upon him, imploring his pity, but he did not choose to notice the mute appeal.

"I have great confidence in you," he continued. "In fact I may say that I trust you."

"Of course you have me in your power," she said with weary resignation. "Because I, too, trusted you, Leonard Simms; but that was when I thought you were a man of honor. Yes, I trusted you and I have paid for my folly—paid bitterly."

"Well, my dear Kate," said Culberson, "I didn't ask you to come here to preach good to indulge in heroics and bring up unpleasant subjects. I hate to see a woman unset!"

She bit her lips and bravely tried to force back the tears in vain, now trembling on her eyelids.

"Have you done what I asked?" he demanded, impatiently.

"Yes," she answered with some boldness, "but I have come here now to tell you that I will not be your tool any longer. I love Margaret Taylor as much as if she were my own daughter, and I will not see her harmed in any way."

"Will you do it?" asked Culberson, coolly.

The woman's hands were clenched, the tears in her eyes gone, and she stared at the dissipated face of the man with something approaching absolute hatred in her manner. But she was silent.

"Have you finished, Miss Kate?" he went on. "But while indulging your sentiment would it not be well to remember that there is someone else to consider besides yourself?"

"I will not see Margaret Taylor harmed," she repeated, stubbornly.

"You are not complimentary in the least," said Culberson, "but I will excuse that. When I first saw the charming Miss Taylor at your house I certainly made up my mind that I wanted her for my wife."

Miss Pierce made a gesture of helpless dissent; Culberson only smiled.

"Considering the circumstances, "that the paternal bank book was sufficiently heavy, I suppose I have to be married to the old man living in a cheap manner in a poor little cottage at Lynn."

"Why do you tell me all this?" asked Miss Pierce.

"Merely to show you that I mean no harm to Margaret Taylor."

"You are deceiving me, Leonard Simms," she exclaimed, almost fiercely. "You do not mean to marry a young girl."

Culberson stroked his blonde mustache and smiled into his companion's face.

"Well, to be frank, Kate," he admitted, "I have not always cared for the girl, but she is able to give a tremendous sum for a single diamond. I thought that when I got home but a wealthy man could indulge such a whim."

"Well?" she asked, as he paused.

"I have my own ideas about that little cottage and why the old man can pay three hundred thousand dollars for 'The Green Diana' since it is worth no more."

"He could no longer afford to keep his daughter at any school," she reminded him.

"I have my own ideas about that, too," he said. "She will not marry you. She doesn't like you."

"She will get over that in time."

"She is engaged to Edward West."

"That is a mere trifle, my dear Kate," He smiled again as if entirely satisfied, and quite confident of the outcome of his plans.

"She is a girl of spirit and you will never be able to force her. Again I tell you I will not let her be harmed."

"You look upon me," he exclaimed in sudden rage, "as a brave and a scoundrel! His face was distorted with anger, and Miss Pierce raised her hands as if to ward off a blow. "Perhaps I am all that," he said again, "but I mean to marry Margaret Taylor, and Kate Pierce can't prevent me."

TWELVE ATTRACTIVE.

IN CHARMING SUBURBAN CITY, we have 12 modern houses, 5 minutes distant from electric cars, 20 minutes from city; all are finished in hard wood, with open fireplaces, Mahogany doors, Pratt & Lambert paint, Massachusetts avenue and Prospect street. There it was held by the crowd while the engine turned in the car and then to carry the big car forward.

Then was Mr. Nisbit awarded the prize. A colored lad who had hung on with all his might to the machine, was the first to grasp the hand. "Good luck, old man," he said. "I'm glad you won it. I didn't."

Everything moved when the skilful management of Harry Woolaver worked the car over the crowded streets.

Even then several men and a woman or two were hanging on the sides. They were reluctant to let go. Everybody in that crowd wanted to get the prize.

"Lucky, isn't I, said Mr. Nisbit when, seated in the machine, he was being borne away from the crowd. His clothing was disarranged, for the scramble had frightened it to get there. His hat had some dents in it. He was breathing hard. But he was supremely happy.

"I never knew I was over in an automobile," he said, when he recovered his breath. "Then he thought of the time.

"That will give me a bully vacation. Been looking for something like this, but never expected it.

"Do you know that I worked over that problem all night, and I had the right one. I was right. Never tried one before."

Nisbit had thought out the plan in my attention. Somehow I felt sure that the Saturday night story would be published and I kept a close watch of that street.

"The point in the cipher that found us away with it. I never expected that it would happen just that way. I can't say yet. But I'm glad I won."

The point in the prize that is awarded each week by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. There are other prizes amounting to $50 that are given to those who can decipher the cipher in the story and who correctly solve the cipher.

Next Sunday there will be another cipher in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN story. Those who solve it are in line to earn just as much of a reward as has been given this week. It is a good story, interesting, entrancing. Those who have not started it yet should begin to-day and try to earn the prizes that are given away each week in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

WHEN Will Men That Work Really Unite Unselfishly for the Benefit of All Classes of Men?

The men that hated Wendell Phillips are forgotten.

Those that derided him and those that sincerely despised him are part of the dust.

But HE lives because he hated slavery—slavery for the black man on the plantation or for THE WHITE WOMAN IN THE MILL.

And he is useful now, as in the past, because his mind was constructive, hopeful, full of belief in men and what they can do.

Read part of a speech that he made to workingmen in days before the world had got used, as it is now, to the THEORY that workers should have what they produce:

"I rejoice at every effort workingmen make to organize. I stand in the presence of a momentous power. If I have 100,000 men represented before me who are in earnest, who get hold of the great question of labor and, having hold of it, grapple with it, rip it open, invest it with light, gathering the facts, piercing the brains about them, and crowding those brains with facts, then I know, sure as fate, though I may not live to see it, that they will certainly conquer this nation in twenty years. That is your power, gentlemen. If you do your duty, and by that I mean standing together and being true to one another, you will decide all elections.

"You ask me to speak to you on the relations of capital and labor. I am a capitalist. Why do I come here? Because I am gravely dissatisfied with the civilization around me. All over the world over one-half of Christendom starves, either bodily or mentally. Even in this country over one-half of the people have never enjoyed the resources of this life. I am ashamed of the civilization that makes 5,000 needy men dependent on one. THE SYSTEM WHICH DEVELOPS THIS IS FAULTY IN ITS VERY FOUNDATION. The ultimate thing which we aim at is co-operation. Our great hope for the future is in the education of the masses, for they will yet be our rulers."

More than twenty years have passed since Wendell Phillips made that speech. And his hopes are not YET realized. But MEN HAVE NOT DONE WHAT HE TOLD THEM TO DO. They have NOT been true to one another, they have not worked intelligently. Each has struggled for himself or his little group. Each has had his mind fixed on the pay of the week, not on the needs of humanity.

But progress HAS been made. And Wendell Phillips's dream WILL be realized.

Sooner or later men will be "true to one another." Those that work will vote together as they work together. The drones and the hired agents of the drones will see the end of their day, and the earth will see the end of that civilization of which Phillips was ashamed and of which EVERY man must be ashamed to-day, unless he ranks, morally and intellectually, with the hyena.

Not forever will "five thousand needy men be dependent on one."

Not forever will too little for the many mean TOO MUCH FOR THE FEW.

This is our first century of universal education. THE WORLD HAS HARDLY LEARNED HOW TO READ. It will learn to read now; it will learn to THINK soon. Then will be vindicated those like Wendell Phillips, who WORKED for MANKIND and BELIEVED IN MEN.

AH! IT WAS TOO LONESOME

How the Olympian Games Have Changed

By Henri Pene Du Bois

NAPLES, April 14, 1906.

THE Olympian games at Athens deserve study. The ancient Greeks lived in the open air. They did not know the drawing room nor the club, and, although they made a goddess of the hearth, they were happy everywhere except at home.

Their places of meeting were public, and near porticos or columns, which were a refuge in case of rain. Even in private houses the only reception room was the dining room. One received one's friends there, in the atrium, or in the garden among trees and statues.

So there were no private theatricals except dances or pantomimes at a banquet, no games in a house, no pretext to reunite the elements of what is known today as a matinee or an evening reception.

Yet man needs diversion, and the Greeks liked as we do the dissipations that are the necessities of life. But they took them outside, and their spectacles in the sun were in the most varied proportions.

The spectators were four around a lutist, a hundred thousand around a disk thrower. It is singular that nations which give Greek names to the most recent inventions have taken for the out-door games of Greece the English name of sports.

The Greeks named their athletics. They were among the fine arts. Statues were raised to living athletes. They were covered with riches and honors by the State and by the city.

If we follow scrupulously antique tradition in matters of taste, gymnastics should be taught where the American school at Rome is.

For the athlete is, in fact and without paradox, an artist. He moulds his body as the singer shapes his voice. He is his own statue. Only he has the gift of subtle and straight attitudes, only he realizes lightness in energy.

The Athenians regarded the athlete in a way which is not similar to ours; to break a record was not a sportive ideal. Doubtless the man that conquered with the disk was the one that threw it farthest and the conqueror at running was always the first, but the Greek had a sort of half esteem only for the specialists of strength.

The athlete in his view was the invincible being. He should have kissed a racer if the muscles of his arms were less robust than those of his legs, and if, on the day after his victory, any passer-by could have made his shoulders touch the ground.

Sports are essentially Hellenic, but one of our jockeys would not have struck Pericles dumb from admiration.

The Greeks did not separate so much the idea of force and the idea of beauty. They thought that painters and sculptors sought for the beautiful in their own way and that athletes realized it in them selves.

Greek art included physical exercise, but it could not distinguish the man from the work since the result of the sport was the development of the sportsman.

And so it formed the athlete in accordance with the laws of harmony and of proportion that Phidias imposed upon his nude cavaliers.

Our wrestlers are fat giants who crush one another under their weight. They would not have been admitted to the ancient Olympian games. The first phase of their initiation, that was jumping, should have disqualified them.

This does not mean that the most agile only were permitted to wrestle. But the men that won in the jumping trials, after disk throwing and foot-racing, were the most agile among the most vigorous. They were complete athletes.

The ideal of Greek athletics presents thus a magnificent image. Inspired by it our sports might be improved immensely.

Our runners, attracted by the ball of prizes, train constantly for the same exercise. They become similar to tenors who lavish high c's all the time and could not sing "John Brown's Body" in a chorus.

ANOTHER REQUEST FOR AN ENLARGEMENT OF CARTER'S CARTOON

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I heartily agree with the wish of Effie Canad of West Somerville in her communication to the picture, "His Fairest Child.". The moment I received the AMERICAN I cut out the picture and mounted it on cardboard and hung it in my store window with the beautiful verses by Mr. Monnagne underneath it. It has attracted considerable attention from passersby. The picture is grand in its pathos, and it may touch many hearts to give when they see it. I wish you could see your way to give us a larger and perhaps even better copy of it. I believe the AMERICAN has done a magnificent work for the saddened sufferers of San Francisco, which will never be forgotten by the thinking public. I believe every citizen of this republic should be grateful for at least one newspaper publisher who is brother afraid to expose an evil fearlessly nor to make financial sacrifice to help a community in its hour of dire necessity, as William Randolph Hearst, the man studied any of them. CALEB.

Dailed dangerous by those whose tremendous wealth has made them arrogant, but the man called blessed by all whose rights he has so fearlessly championed.

CROP OF NEW EXPRESSIONS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The verbal extravagance that have been thrust upon us within the past few years show no signs of abatement. First, we had "unconscious cerebrate." Then "the strenuous life," the "square deal," "race suicide," and now it is the "muck rake." The "sensational man" appears at in from every alternate page of the ten-cent magazine, while the "man behind the gun" has been supplanted by the "expert accountant." who does all kinds of heroic things. No one is expected to tell a story nowadays without first "lighting a cigar." The hero's name is generally "Jack", and he has "muscles of steel," and he is so "well contained" that a dynamite explosion would not fease him. He knows everything, from agriculture to astronomy, without having

SAY FERD, IT'S ABOUT TIME WE GOT BUSY AND DID A LITTLE HOUSE-CLEANING. WE MIGHT BEAT THIS RUG OUT ON THE FIRE-ESCAPE AT THE END OF THE HALL.
YES, WE COULDN'T VERY WELL DO IT FROM OUR WINDOW, AS PEOPLE WOULD SEE US FROM THE STREET.
1
SAY PERC - LET'S SWIPE THE LANDLADYS PRUNES. SHE HAS A DISH OF THEM COOLING ON THE WINDOW SILL. SHE'S OUT SHOPPING, AND I'M FEELING JUST LIKE PRUNES. ARE YOU ON?
GEE! BUT THE DUST DOES COLLECT.
2
HE? HE? SHE'LL NEVER KNOW WHO TOOK THEM.
SHE'LL THINK THE KIDS ACROSS THE YARD GOT NEXT TO THEM. HAW! HAW!
3
OH DO COME IN AND HAVE SUPPER MY DEAR ARABELLA. I STEWED UP SOME PRUNES. YOU KNOW HOW FOND YOU ARE OF THEM. MY SOUL, WHAT WAS THAT STRUCK ME ON THE HAND? A PRUNE PIT!
DID YOU EVER MAKE PRUNE PUDDING? YOU MIX UP FOUR TABLESPOONFULS OF GELATINE AND - ANYHOW I'LL SEND OVER MY RECIPE IT SIMPLY MAKES A LOVELY PUDDING.
4
SAKES ALIVE! SOME SCAMP HAS STOLEN MY DISH OF PRUNES. THOSE HALL BOY BOYS. BET THEY'RE ALWAYS UP TO SOME DEVILTRY. NOW I UNDERSTAND THE MEANING OF THOSE PITS.
THE VERY IDEA!
5
OH YOU NEEDN'T TRY AND HIDE THAT DISH OF PRUNES, MR. HALL ROOM, I SUSPECTED YOU AS SOON AS I MISSED THEM.

THE LANDLADY INTERRUPTS THEIR SURREPTITIOUS FEAST

Merry Mayday

By Wex Jones

OH, gee! Such a life as we're leading to-day!
All over our flat there's the dickens to pay.
We eat from the washtubs and sleep on the floor,
And everyone's flurried, and worried, and sore;
And if you would fathom the depths of our pain,
You'll know when you hear that we're moving again.

THE furniture's gone and the dishes and pans
In a snail-slow procession of gay-gilded vans
(They've been gone for three days and are still on the road—
They move near a mile in a week with a load);
So we camp on bare boards and commune with our pain
And wonder what makes us be moving again.

THE flat that we have is, honest, a beaut,
Which the landlord repapered and painted to suit;
It's airy and light, and not far from the "L."
And the bellboys — yes, honest — will answer the bell,
We're pleased with the place, and yet —oh, the pain!—
We're moving—because it's the fashion —again.

EACH year at this time we sign a new lease,
Through some rage for migration that hits us like geese.
Supposing the new flat's a different type,
We're taking a chance in exchange for a pipe.
But next Mayday, perhaps, we may lighten our pain
By moving back into this same flat again.

Dinkelspiel Doesn't Like the Landscape

By George V. Hobart

HOME DIS VEEK.

WEIN LIEBER SON. LOOEY:

I haf receifed your letter from New Hafen und I notice vot you say dot your firm vill spend next year someding like five hunnert t'ousand dollars in atwertising.

A'atwertising is der incubator vich hatches der golden egg, Looey, but ait der same time I hate to see it stuck, like a lot of second-hand court plaster, all ofer der face of Nature.

I iuff to read der atwertisements in der newspapers und der magazines, but I also luff to be able to stop reading dem von der supper bell rings, vich is not der case dese days if you vas travelling on der railroads.

Nowadays it is, Looey, dot someding vich vunes vas a beautiful landscape has been eggschanged for a board fence vare it says: "Eat Eatem's Eatability—Der Most Eatable Eating Ever Eated."

I dink der idea of changing a green hillside into a lecture on indichestion, und making all der pretty trees indicate der roadside point deir branches in der direction of a drug store vas wrong, but mebbe I haf too much poeticuess in my veins und not enough pituness.

I took a leedle trip to Woorcester on der cars last week und it vas den dot dis idea struck me mit such a forcibleness dot I hat to pull down der blind.

I began to look ould der window to admire all der sceneography vich vas rushing py und before I could see two spruce trees und aboudt eighteen blades of grass a large sign chumped before my eyes und zed, "Sawdust Fritters—Der New Breakfast Food—Vunce Svallowed, Nefer Forgotten."

I vinked my eyes a cubble of times und took another look, und dare, spread carelessly ofer der map, vas a sign vich set, "Blonde Pills For Brainy Peoples—Try Vun Box Und You Vill Nefer Try Annuder."

I dodged my eyes back into der car und glanced dem cautiously ould der vindow on der udder side of der car, und dare I saw it, "Drink Binglebauer's Viskey—All Judges Say It Makes Trade Lively—Especially Der Police Judges."

For ten minutes I sat dare mit my eyes closed-fisted, und den I took a leedle peep ould der vindow, vich resulted in a sign vich set, "Smoke Yellowfinger's Cigaroots—Und Dis Lingering But Dopey."

Den I began to argue der matter mit myself und I came to der conclusiong dot der train vas still in der heart of civilisation, und ven we reached der real country der landscape vould assert its rights und begin to happen.

Den I counted 250 mit my eyes closed, und den, remoodling my fingers slowly, slowly, slowly, I took a sly glance oferboard.

Vot I saw vas a big sign saying dese solemn vords: "Be A Good Chooser Und Chew Chawington's Choo-Choo—Der Gum Dot Doan'd Come Off."

"Surely," I vispered to myself, mit my back to der vindow, "surely dare vas a visitation of Nature here at vun time vich must haf left some landscape behind it, but vare is it now?"

Dus in deep t'ought, mit both hands pressed hard ofer my eyes, I sat dare for about an hour, und den mit der swiftness of der turtle dove I threw both glances ould of der vindow, Vas it landscape pure and simple vich met dose glances?

No.

It vas a sign vich set dose few but bitter vords:

Children, dear, in any case
Doan'd drive nails in mother's face!
If you do and she should scream,
Try Mike Schmidt's Complexion Cream

Now, I ask you Looey, is it possible for a ot-fashioned man to lead a refined life in such a atmosphere as dese?

I ask you, Looey. Yours mit luff,

D. DINKELSPIEL,
